McNutt Cites Views

By Ben W. Gilbert

The War Manpower Commission announced yesterday that it was not counting on further increases in munitions industries' manpower, permitting a downward revision of 600,000 in its estimate of the total labor force—industrial, agricultural and military—needed by July 1.

The revision was disclosed at a press conference held by WMC Executive Director Lawrence A. Appley, and Assistant Executive Director William Haber.

The officials declined to discuss President Roosevelt's request to Congress for national service legislation, but observers expected the 600,000 "windfall" to be exploited by congressional opponents of labor draft legislation.

Meanwhile, WMC Chairman Paul V. McNutt, in a speech before the Louisville (Ky.) management-labor committee, asserted that no change in the commission's program "would be sensible, law or no law."

Outlining the basic principles that he said should underlie national service legislation, McNutt said, "No major war program has come so far without a law. No nation in the world has achieved such a record by voluntary means." Urging his listeners to "carry on," he reminded them that the law hasn't been passed yet and that "the timing and character of a law is entirely up to Congress."

Increase Scaled Down

As a result of the WMC revision, the total "labor force" will have to expand 900,000, from 64.8 millions in July, 1943, to 65.7 millions in July, 1944, instead of expanding 1,500,000 over the twelve-month period to 66.3 millions.

The officials made no effort to minimize the difficulty of the manpower shifts that will be required to secure the 900,000 expansion. They indicated that the armed forces will require 800,000 additional men between January 1, 1944, and July 1, 1944. Some manpower will be released by civilian industries and nonindustrial employment by that time.

The savings—mainly from revision of the requirements of munitions-making — were described by Appley as a result of:

1. Reduction in paper schedules established by manufacturers in

35-Million TNT Plant Ordered Closed by Army

St. Louis, Jan. 13 (AP).—The Army's 35-million-dollar Weldon Spring Ordnance Works, which has been producing TNT since September, 1941, has been ordered shut down at the close of operations Sunday.

The order, involving discharge of 2500 employes, came from Maj. Gen. L. H. Campbell, Jr., Chief of Ordnance.

The letter explained "the requirements for TNT are fixed by the Army supply program, which in turn is based on changing battle conditions," and said the decision to reduce production was "due to the great efficiency of our ordnance high explosives manufacturing plants."

Driver Steamed Up As Cold Passenger Starts Fire in Bus

Green Bay, Wis., Jan. 13 (AP).—A woman tapped Elmer Kendall, a bus driver on the shoulder and asked:

"Don't you think you had better stop the bus and put out the fire?"

Kendall turned around to see a man sitting with his shoes off warming his feet at a fire made in the aisle of the bus with crumpled newspapers.

The driver put out the fire—and the passenger with cold feet.

Union Suspends Seven in Walkout

Pittsburgh, Jan. 13 (AP).—In one of the first actions of the kind, the international office of the CIO United Steelworkers of America today suspended seven officers of Local 1163 in connection with a "wildcat" walkout last week involving 2400 employes of the Robertshaw Thermostat Co.

The company announced it has suspended the seven officers and five other workers with the intent to dismiss them after a hearing, as provided by its union clause.

Roosevelt's Budget Message

100 Billions Asked For War to July, 1945

By Robert C. Albright

President Roosevelt yesterday sent Congress a 100-billion-dollar war budget, making full allowance for continuation of the war through June 30, 1945, and projecting total war costs since the start of hostilities to 397 billion dollars.

"In our military planning, in our production planning, and in our financial planning," the President said, "we cannot rely with safety on hopes of earlier victory."

The second 12-cipher budget in two years, like the first, was highly tentative—was in fact a budget in flux—postponing the bulk of detailed war estimates until shifts in war strategy and needs determine actual requirements.

The President allowed for a possible earlier victory on the European fronts. If this should occur, he pledged Congress: "War production will be promptly adjusted to the changed requirements, and war expenditures in the fiscal year 1945 will be less than estimated at the present time."

Dedicating his 20-page message to the "double task" of decisive war action and foundations for peace, the President used his 1945 fiscal year statement to hammer home to Congress in detail his war and peace policies.

From the need of new revenue and continued wage-price controls to ward off spiraling costs, to food subsidies and farm supports to meet the third war year's greatly increased food demands, Mr. Roosevelt again challenged Congress on many a home front issue.

Then the President looked beyond the war to develop more explicitly than ever before his program for the period of reconversion and peace. From termination of war contracts and industrial reconversion his projected plans ranged through an outline for demobilization and reemployment, long range public works, aids and opportunities for veterans, expanded Social Security coverage and international planning for the

Record Expenditure Forecast For Running District in 1945

(Other D. C. Budget Stories on Page B-1.)

By James E. Chinn

A District budget for the 1945 fiscal year totaling $66,731,055, the largest in the history, was sent to Congress yesterday, and without calling for higher taxes, proposes to wipe out all municipal debts for the first time in 13 years and set up a three-million-dollar reserve for a public works program to be carried out as soon as wartime priorities are relaxed.

Compared with funds appropriated to run the District in the current fiscal year ending June 30, the budget figures represent an increase of $11,126,718.

Vitally needed public improvements that can't wait on the war to end, such as additional school, highway, water, sewer and public recreational facilities are provided in the budget. The understaffed health department, Gallinger Hospital and the District Tuberculosis Sanatorium at Glenn Dale, Md., are given more help.

Other municipal services which have bogged down under the strain of Washington's inflated wartime population are allowed more money for operations. These include the Refuse Department and the Department of Inspections.

No relief, however, is provided for the Police and Fire Departments, which are now functioning far under their authorized strength because of the manpower shortage. The Police Department has 225 vacancies to fill and the Fire Department, 93.

Each department is allocated funds to replace worn-out equipment, and for the Police Department only, the budget creates a new rank—that of corporal—for men who want to advance a grade higher than a first-class private. Sixty-five privates will be elevated from the ranks to fill the new positions which offer a $200 yearly increase in pay.

Though the school population has declined slightly despite the great influx of warworkers, the budget includes $86,080 for preparation of

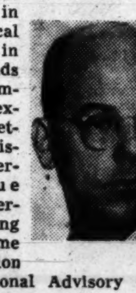
Roosevelt Lauds U. S. Workers, Condemns 'Unjustified Stigma'

By Jerry Kluttz



President Roosevelt made a stout defense of Federal workers yesterday in a message to Congress that asked for 100 billions to operate the Federal Government in the 1945 fiscal year and in which funds were recommended to expand the Veterans Administration, Internal Revenue Bureau, General Accounting Office, Maritime Commission and the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics, among other agencies. Overall, however, very few budget changes were proposed in the appropriations of old-line agencies.

In his message the President told Congress that Federal employment in this country was 2,798,000 in October, which was 205,000 below the peak reached in June. He called on each agency head to "continue aggressive efforts for improvement in the management and economical functioning of his organization." Moreover, he asked the agencies for a report on what they had accomplished along these lines since he had ordered them a year ago to eliminate each nonvital service and to conserve manpower, materials and money.

Mr. Roosevelt told Congress there had been "too much unfounded disparagement of Government employment." No one, he said, can estimate what this has cost in impaired morale, employe turnover, recruitment difficulties and retardation of essential war work. "Thousands of Americans entered the Government service or have remained in it with single-hearted determination to contribute to victory," he said, "yet Government employes frequently have had to bear an unjustified stigma, somehow associated with the mistaken assumption that nearly all of them occupy

Union Would Lose Rights

Rep. Smith Introduces Bill Outlawing Wartime Strikes

By Mary Spargo

Closely following President Roosevelt's request for a national war service law, legislation to outlaw strikes was introduced in the House yesterday.

The bill, presented by Representative Smith (Democrat) of Virginia, coauthor of the Connally-Smith Act, would deprive any local labor union whose members are involved in a strike, slowdown or concerted stoppage, of its designation as bargaining agent. Officers would be prevented for the duration of the war not only from representing the same members, but from representing any labor organization or local union, as bargaining agents.

The Gallup Poll, meanwhile, said in a statement that President Roosevelt's call for a national service law "is in line with majority opinion throughout the United States."

"Since March, 1942, or 21 months ago, many thousands of representative voters whose views were sampled in a half dozen surveys by the American Institute of Public Opinion have favored the principle of total mobilization," said the statement. "Even those who think they might be drafted under a national service law favored the idea. On few major issues of the war have Congress and the Administration lagged so far behind public opinion."

Smith said his measure would provide a quick method of stopping

U. S. to Probe $700,000 CIO Political Fund

Biddle Acts on Charge by Smith That Election Law Has Been Violated

The Department of Justice will investigate charges that the CIO and its president, Philip Murray, have violated criminal provisions of the Connally-Smith Act in contributing funds to the CIO political action committee, it was disclosed last night.

The charges were made by Representative Smith (Democrat) of Virginia, coauthor of the labor disputes act, in a letter to Attorney General Biddle.

Smith asserted that there had been a "flagrant violation of the criminal provisions of Section 9 of the War Labor Disputes Act."

The section makes it unlawful "for any labor organization to make a contribution in connection with any election at which presidential or vice presidential electors, or a Senator or Representative in, or a Delegate or Resident Commissioner to Congress are to be voted for."

Cites Murray Article

The Virginia Representative told the Attorney General that an article by Murray in the February issue of the American Magazine was a "flagrant and defiant confession of the violation of the statute."

He cited a sentence from the article, "The various CIO unions have made an initial contribution of $700,000," as evidence, and asked Biddle to present the matter to a Federal grand jury "forthwith, with a view to indictment and prosecution."

The article, entitled "Labor's Political Aims,' described the purpose of the CIO poltical action committee, whose chairman is Sidney Hillman, head of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers.

Investigation Ordered

The Justice Department revealed that the Attorney General had requested Tom C. Clark, head of the Criminal Division, to "investigate at once and take any action the facts warrant."

Smith asserted that the article showed clearly objectives of the CIO poltical action committee are clearly indicated as designed to influence, if not control, the national elections in 1944."

In the article Murray said that war service of young men and public apathy in 1942 had resulted in the election of "many reactionary and antilabor men, including Democrats as well as Republicans," to Congress and to State offices.

He discussed the "vicious and continuous attacks" of the present Congress "on labor and labor's rights," and asserted the tax program and failure to control inflation hit every citizen.

"The Political Action Committee will work to prevent the reelection of men like these," Murray wrote.

For some time certain members of Congress from heretofore rural districts have been concerned over the possible effect of wartime dislocation of populations which have brought large numbers of indus-

Drys Open Prohibition Drive, Charge Sprees to Warworkers

Battle on Bottles

By the Associated Press

Organized drys condemned "payday drinking" and "weekend sprees" yesterday as they fired the opening guns in a congressional drive for national prohibition.

Leaders of the major antiliquor groups told a House Judiciary Subcommittee that prompt enactment of the Bryson bill to outlaw alcoholic beverages for the duration is essential in the interest of a better war effort.

They had the show virtually to themselves as the committee held a one-day public session to hear supporters of the bill written by Representative Bryson (Democrat) of South Carolina, who calls himself a "prohibitionist, externally, internally and eternally." When hearings will be held to hear opponents was not determined, but Chairman Hobbs (Democrat) of Alabama promised an opportunity for "everybody who cares to speak."

Several congressional opponents including Representative Feighan (Democrat) of Ohio, didn't wait for committee hearings to air their views. Feighan made a speech in the House putting "professional prohibitionists in a class with the saboteur." The Ohioan is a member of the subcommittee that held yesterday's hearings and his sentiments, along with the privately-expressed views of colleagues, indicated the Bryson bill may be headed for a committee pigeonhole.

The prohibition witnesses included:

Dr. George W. Crabbe, superintendent of the Antisaloon League, who condemned the liquor business as a "nonessential, luxury enterprise" that has no place in a war. He advocated "complete suppression of a traffic which involves not only economic waste but carries with it added social dangers by increasing absenteeism in war work, contributing to industrial and traffic accidents, and causing loose talk which may endanger the lives of our men and involve possible frustration of military plans."

Crabbe recommended that the President establish nonliquor zones in the vicinity of industrial plants.

Wilbur L. DuBois, Milwaukee chemical engineer and food chemist, who blamed a large part of industrial absenteeism on "weekend sprees" and "payday" drinking.

Mrs. Ida B. Wise Smith, national president of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, who said 375,000 saloons are "a constant threat to efficiency" and "a potential breeder of sabotage."

The only opposing view that went into the committee record was a brief statement by Representative Forand (Democrat) of Rhode Island contending the Bryson bill would "impede the war effort" and bring back "the evils of bootlegging and racketeering."

Feighan's speech in the House charged that prohibitionists are seeking to "divide the American people at a time when unity is our greatest need."

Bombs Away

London, Jan. 13 (AP).—British and American bombers, escorted by fighters, bombed the outskirts of Rome at noon today, the Rome radio announced tonight.

A subsequent broadcast from Berlin said 90 raiders made the attack.

Three Allied craft were reported shot down in an aerial battle that ensued. The targets were not identified, but the broadcast said civilian dwellings were hit and that there were casualties.

There was no immediate confirmation from Allied quarters.

Several Allied formations flew over Vatican City, the broadcast said, but it did not intimate that the Vatican was attacked.

The outskirts of the Italian capital were last hit by Allied planes on December 28, when American two-engine Mitchells and Marauder bombers of the Fifteenth Air Force tore up hangars and other installations and destroyed parked planes at three Nazi airdromes.

At that time, German propaganda agencies attempted to leave the impression the city itself had been attacked.

During the two previous bombings, on July 19 and August 13, while Italy was still at war with the Allies, great forces of American heavy and medium bombers loosed tons of explosives on the city's rail and airfield installations.

The Rome broadcast said:

"Formations of Anglo-American planes escorted by fighters flew over the city toward mid-day today. They followed a route which had been shown to them by fighters.

"Bombs dropped in the outskirts hit civilian dwellings.

"Vatican City also was flown over several times by enemy formations.

"Fighter planes immediately engaged the raiders. Three Allied aircraft have so far been reported shot down on the outskirts of the city.

"The number of victims has not been ascertained."

5 Targets Smashed In Greatest Air Battle in History

London, Jan. 13 (AP).—American airmen shot down at least 152 German fighters at a record cost of 60 bombers and 5 fighters in history's greatest sky battle Tuesday, and blasted two other targets, besides shattering the three aircraft centers southwest of Berlin, it was disclosed officially tonight.

The Eighth Air Force recapitulation hiked enemy fighter losses from 100 to 152, and added one more American heavy bomber to the 59 announced yesterday as having failed to return from the raid carried out by more than 1200 fighters and bombers.

Eager to Strike Again

Fresh American crews rolled new bombers out on runways today to replace the lost 60 and were ready and eager to strike another paralyzing blow at the enemy's anti-invasion efforts centered in air production plants.

Squadrons of planes drawn from Hitler's anti-invasion reserve were disclosed by Transocean to have been thrown into action in the vain effort to block the raiders.

The German propaganda agency indicated in a broadcast that Germany had been forced to throw up virtually all available air units.

"It was openly admitted by authoritative military quarters." Transocean said, "that Luftwaffe (air force) squadrons which so far had been held in reserve for particularly important operations shortly to be expected went into action Tuesday."

Sixth Army Force Pushes Into Area Japs Had Claimed

Allied Headquarters, New Guinea (Friday), Jan. 14 (AP).—Japanese inland positions on Arawe Peninsula, southern New Britain, were successfully raided by American patrols Wednesday, Allied headquarters announced today.

The Americans of the Sixth Army pushed into enemy territory after paths had been blasted by artillery fire. The main Japanese force here was not encountered in the action, a spokesman said.

The principal American invasion force still is on the peninsula, it was said.

A Tokyo radio report yesterday stating that the Japanese had recaptured Arawe has been denied by a spokesman who said "we're still right there and on the job."

Japanese attempting to evacuate northeastern New Guinea, before the Australians, now near Sio, were caught in their barges by Allied light naval craft, which sank three, each containing about 30 Nipponese.

Dog Storms Machinegun Nest, Flushes a Brace of Fine Birds

New York, Jan. 13 (INS).—One of the Nation's highest medals—the Distinguished Service Cross—has been awarded to a dog for heroic action in the Sicilian campaign.

This was announced tonight by Dogs for Defense, Inc., which stated that the War Department waived regulations to award the D. S. C. to a dog, Chips, for the first time.

Chips—a cross between a German shepherd and a Husky—previously had been awarded the Purple Heart medal for wounds received in action, and the Silver Star for gallantry.

Tonight's announcement said Chips was presented with the D. S. C. by Maj. Gen. Lucian Truscott. The citation accompanying the medal lauded the dog for his "courageous action in singlehandedly eliminating a dangerous machine gun nest and causing surrender of its crew."

The feat for which Chips was cited occurred on the night of July 10, 1943. The dog landed on the beach near Licata with an American detachment which was immediately brought under heavy machine-gun fire from camouflaged peasant's hut some 400 yards from shore. Chips executed a one-dog flank attack on the hut, leaped inside, and in a matter of seconds chased out two Italian machine gunners—their hands raised in surrender.

Chips has been in the Army since August, 1942, when he was enlisted through Dogs for Defense, Inc., by his owners, Mr. and Mrs. Edward J. Wren of Pleasantville, N. Y.

Frantic Germans Attack in Vain; Russians Widen Old Poland Salient

London (Friday), Jan. 14 (AP).—The Russian army beat back frantic German counterattacks on the road to Rumania for the second straight day yesterday in perhaps one of the decisive battles of the winter, killing 3000 Germans in "extremely fierce fighting," while other forces extended the Russian salient into old Poland to an 80-mile front.

Farther north in White Russia, Soviet forces drove to the rail hub of Kalinkovichi and the regional center of Mozyr, now outflanked and all but surrounded, Moscow said. More than 1500 Germans were killed, many taken prisoner, and 11 of their tanks and guns destroyed as the Russians reached the gates of the two towns, 5 miles apart.

The Moscow communique said large forces of Germans were fighting bitterly to halt the Russians hammering south toward the Ukrainian Bug River and the Rumanian frontier.

In this fighting, east of Vinnitsa, the communique said, "some populated places changed hands several times. The enemy suffered heavy losses but achieved no success whatsoever."

Key Rail Line Is Objective

At stake in this battle—the first important counterattack launched by the Germans since the Russians broke through their lines west of Kiev—was not only the Rumanian frontier but the Odessa-Lwow railroad, the last direct communications route feeding Germans in the Dnieper bend. The Russians were last reported at Nemirov, 21 miles north of the railroad, and only 5 miles north of the Bug.

To the north, the right wing of Gen. Nikolai Vatutin's First Ukrainian Army captured the district center of Korets, extending the Russian line into old Poland, and advanced to the rail station of Tutovichi, 11 miles west of Sarny on the railroad to Warsaw.

46 Miles Inside Old Poland

Tutovichi's seizure put the Russians 46 miles inside the prewar Polish frontier.

Also captured was the town of Kilikiez, giving the Red army a continuous line into old Poland from Dombrovitsa, 17 miles north of Sarny, southwest to Tutovichi, then southeast to Korets and Kilikiev. This line, more than 80 miles long, gave the Russians more than 2000 square miles of territory in old Poland.

More than 60 other towns and hamlets were captured by Vatutin's forces in the Korets area.

(A British broadcast recorded in New York by CBS said the Germans near Sarny were retreating in such disorder that important bridges were found undamaged, that many tanks and guns were abandoned, and that in one town German army bakers left dough ready for the oven. The Red Army baked it.)

Gen. Constantine Rokossovsky's offensive to Mozyr smashed through a powerful German defense zone saturated with artillery, the Moscow bulletin said. The enemy attaches "enormous importance" to the Mozyr-Kalinkovichi area, the bulletin said.

The Russians made a deep outflanking maneuver and smashed at the German flank and rear. Other forces, coming in from the south,

FCC Not to Bar Radio Stations To Newspapers

The Federal Communications Commission voted unanimously last night against any general rule discriminating against newspapers in acquiring radio stations, but said it would "not permit concentration of control in the hands of the few to the exclusion of the many who may be equally well qualified."

The decision was generally interpreted as meaning that while newspaper ownership is no bar, this factor would be given consideration in the event the commission found two applicants for a station to be equally well qualified.

Mother of 12 In Services To Sell Bonds

New York, Jan. 13 (AP).—Every one of Mrs. Emma Van Coutren's 12 children are in the service—six sailors, three WACS, a soldier, a Marine and a Merchant Seaman.

When the last one donned a uniform, the 58-year-old mother expressed regret in a letter to President Roosevelt that "the source of supply is exhausted."

But there was still herself left. So today she registered as a "Minute Woman" in the fourth war bond drive.

Jap Ship Sunk, Destroyer Hit In Marshalls

Pearl Harbor, Jan. 13 (AP).—Seventh Army Air Forces bombers sank a small auxiliary vessel, probably sank a medium cargo ship and damaged a large Japanese destroyer in their latest attack on Maloelap atoll of the Marshall Islands.

The raid was made the night of January 11, the Navy said today, and brings to 13 the number of enemy ships sunk or damaged in the Marshalls in five attacks this month.

Increasingly frequent reports of enemy shipping in the Marshalls atolls indicate strong efforts to reinforce and supply the Japanese bases there—bases that have been hit almost daily.

Army bombers also blasted installations on several islands of the Maloelap atoll but the extent of the damage was unreported. Two of six intercepting Japanese fighters were believed damaged. All our planes returned.

Army airmen attacked Mili both January 10 and 11 but the damage was unreported. One of our planes was lost, but the crew was saved.

The Japanese countered with an early morning raid on Tarawa, in the Gilbert Islands, January 12, resulting in only minor damage and minor casualties.

The press release was the first mentioning the presence of Japanese destroyers in the Marshalls.

This might indicate the Japanese have been running in small ships virtually unescorted but have decided to escort cargo ships—which evidently now are carrying material they value highly.

Typhus Epidemic, Worse Than Last, Rages in Naples

Cairo, Jan. 13 (INS).—A typhus epidemic in Naples 50 times as bad as the last one last October was revealed today to be raging in the Allied-occupied seaport city in southern Italy.

Staff Sergt. Gilbert M. Zeller, 27, was wounded on November 26, while serving in the Mediterranean combat zone, the War Department announced yesterday.

His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Zeller, of 1638 Trinidad ave. recently learned that he has recovered and returned to active duty.

A native of the District, Sergeant Zeller attended Wheatley School and prior to entering the Army in August, 1942, was employed here as a steamfitter. He has been serving overseas since September as an engineer with the Air Corps.

French Take Height, Yanks Push On After Cervaro Falls

Algiers, Jan. 13 (AP).—French troops under Gen. Alphonse Juin opened a flanking drive through Italy's rugged Apennines Mountains and seized peaks overlooking Acquafondala, 7 miles northeast of Cassino, while American infantry in a frontal assault from captured Cervaro pushed within 3 miles of Cassino, main German stronghold on the Fifth Army Front. The Allied command announced today.

Americans pressed on toward Cassino after they entered the fortress village of Cervaro at 1 p. m. yesterday, while British units on their left flank fought forward along the railway leading into Cassino and menaced Nazi control of the last heights southeast of the city.

Cassino, thus stripped of its main defenses to the east, southeast and south, was expected to fall soon to the steady, grinding assault of Lieut. Gen. Mark W. Clark's forces.

The American-equipped French troops in their renewed attack on the inland wing of the Fifth Army Front were fighting through some of the roughest country in Europe.

North of Acquafondala, the French advanced two-thirds of a mile southwest of Roccheta and captured a 3000-foot peak in the Monna Casale Range that commands a portion of the Colli-Atina Road. General Juin's surprise advance bagged a number of Nazi prisoners.

Virtually the entire Fifth Army was on the move, but the Eighth still had not renewed its offensive on the Adriatic end of the line. A front dispatch described how Canadian troops, impatient for another crack at the enemy, had set up rifle ranges in canyons immediately behind the battle line in order to brush up their marksmanship.

Thick weather grounded heavy bombers of the United States Fifteenth Air Force yesterday, but American medium and fighter-bombers pounded enemy positions and communications behind the line. Two Nazi planes were shot down and three Allied craft were missing.

Allies Bagged 28 Nazi Planes In Sofia Raid

Algiers, Jan. 13 (AP).—The American Fifteenth Air Force announced today that a recheck of Monday's air fight over Sofia, Bulgaria, showed that Flying Fortresses and their Lightning fighter escort shot down 28 out of 60 Nazi interceptors.

(A dispatch from Bern, Switzerland, said Sofia was "completely destroyed" in Monday's day and night assault by Fortresses and Wellingtons, adding that evacuation of the Bulgarian capital had become a "mass flight." All telephone and telegraph communications were said to have been broken and the Parliament Building heavily damaged.)

Tito Hits Supply Lines

London, Jan. 13 (AP).—Yugoslav Partisans under Marshal Josip Broz (Tito) are striking at German communications between Banja Luka and Zagreb, a principal supply route for the Nazi thrust into the heart of liberated territory, they announced today.

The communique broadcast by the Free Yugoslav radio, which monitors were able to transcribe only partially, said the guerillas were continuing offensive operations in Bosnia.

Yugoslav sources in London described the German drive southward from Baja Luka as the most serious threat the Army of Liberation thus far has faced.

Boyington Told Story For Radio

By the Associated Press

The voice of Maj. Gregory Boyington, recorded before he was shot down and reported missing in action in the South Pacific, was heard in a recording over American radio stations yesterday, describing a raid on Rabaul in which he shot down four Japanese planes.

Boyington has been listed as missing since January 3, when his plane went down in an air scrap in which he accounted for his twenty-sixth enemy plane, tying the record of Maj. Joe Foss, also a Marine flier.

Boyington of Okanogan, Wash., was interviewed December 23 at Vella Lavella by Sergt. James O. Hardin, jr., Marietta, Ga., who recorded the interview for broadcasting.

Boyington said:

"The first contact I made was with a lone Zero that made a pass at the tail of my formation. I just kept following him down from about 18,000 down to about 6000 when I finally boresighted him from about 50 feet behind and blew him up in flames . . .

"The second time I saw Zeros, there were two of them. I thought at first it was one of our planes being attacked by a Zero. I went up and found it was a Zero that had been crippled.

'I caught this one on fire from about 100 yards behind. The pilot bailed out and the other Zero turned on me and I pulled out of his way. The plane crashed in the water and the pilot landed not far from it.

"The escorting Zero went down and circled around the pilot in the water. I came down from 10,000 feet, unknown to him, out of the sun. I got within about 50 feet behind him and set him afire and he never bailed out . . ."

"I went to 18,000 and circled over Rabaul for about 20 minutes. I finally located a patrol of nine Zekes in V-formation. I came down unknown to the Zekes and picked off the tail-end man and then ran like a son of a gun."

Boyington finished up that day's activities by strafing a submarine as he started home.

2 German Suicides Laid to Fear of Fellow Prisoners

Omaha, Jan. 12 (AP).—Two suicides among German prisoners of war at the Concordia, Kans., interment camp were attributed by the Seventh Service Command tonight to "fear of persecution wielded by the Nazis."

The Germans were Franz Kettner, private first class in the German army, who slashed his wrists while held in protective custody at his own request, and an unidentified German captain accused of "making remarks against Hitler," who hanged himself after being "removed from his quarters by fellow prisoners and taken to another room, where he was left with a piece of rope, a bed, a chair, a table, and his personal belongings," the command said.

Investigation of the captain's death, the command reported, resulted in "rather conclusive evidence of the existence of a system of 'kangaroo court-martials' in the prison camp compounds" at which officers were "tried."

Kettner said "something like 'they're after me,'" when he asked to be placed in the guard house where no person from the prisoners' compounds could reach him, the statement said.

Polish-Soviet Settlement Near; Curzon Line Solution Indicated

London, Jan. 13 (AP).—Progress toward settlement of the Russian-Polish boundary dispute was indicated tonight.

After almost continuous meetings since Russia on Tuesday suggested the Curzon Line as a settlement basis, the Polish government in London postponed a reply while the Polish Premier Mikolajczyk and Foreign Minister Romer conferred with British Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden. It was understood, however, that the Polish answer had been drafted.

In Moscow, the Soviet press published an extensive review of the boundary question dating from 1919, including large maps showing the Curzon Line. A Moscow dispatch said this in itself was taken to indicate progress toward an amicable settlement, and that the Russians were prepared to deal on the basis of the Curzon Line.

The Soviet maps located the line as following a course from north of Grodno, past Yelovka, Memirov, Brest-Litovsk, Dorogubsk and Ustilug east of Grubesjov, through Krylov westward to Rawa Ruska, then east of Przemysl to the Carpathian Mountains. The Polish-Lithuanian border was listed as fixed north of Grodno.

There was a suggestion in London that the Poles might have delayed their answer while they studied the Moscow article and maps, with the possibility that the Russians might be willing to yield the City of Lwow.

12 Killed, 40 Hurt In Train Collision At Texas Station

Novice, Tex., Jan. 13 (AP).—A passenger train slashed into the rear of another at the Santa Fe station today, killing at least 12 persons and injuring 40 to 45, several of them critically. Both trains were westbound.

Dick Cooke, reporter for the Abilene Reporter-News, said most of those killed were in a chair car on the first train. The victims have not been identified but Santa Fe officials at Temple, Tex., said that two soldiers were among the dead.

Pasco, Wash., Jan. 13 (AP).—Two railway locomotives collided in a heavy fog near White Bluffs, Wash., today, killing four and injuring six of their crewmen.

Montreal Employes End Municipal Strike

Montreal, Jan. 13 (AP).—Montreal's City Hall was back to normal today as 2300 striking municipal white-collar workers returned to work in response to an appeal from their leaders, calling off the 23-day strike and submitting their wage increase demands to arbitration.

Reich Raid Like Grim Game of Musical Chairs

By Gladwin Hill

London, Jan. 13 (AP).—It was a grim aerial game of musical chairs with one bomber moving up, step by step, taking the place of others shot down. . . .

It was a shell fragment slicing an astonished gunner's ammunition belt and a boy jabbing himselw with a morphine needle to numb an aching shoulder. . . .

It was the hell of a plane plunging wildly with no certainty it was every going to come out of it. . . .

The whole story of one of the war's great battles in the American air bombardment of central Germany Tuesday probably never will be told because it is a thousand things to thousands of men.

More than 700 bombers spread over many miles of sky, and each one's experience was different. Some got through unscathed and they couldn't believe that 60 of their number went down. Others were amazed that they ever got home.

It started like other missions. Turning out in the blackness of an early winter morning. The briefing room. Red lines on a map. Main objective: Three of the Nazi s prime fighting plants—a major stroke in the campaign to knock out the German air force and clinch air supremacy for invasion—plants hardly a hundred miles from Berlin.

"I kind of expected all hell to break loose," said Fortress Pilot Bernard Davey of Atlanta, Ga. "As we headed into enemy territory, I kept thinking of the crew. With a good crew you always have a better chance of coming back."

The American bombers flew over one large, dead, black city. There was little traffic on German highways, but lots of trains were chuffing along.

The Nazis quickly ascertained that raiders with a 500-plane fighter escort were coming either for the capital or those prize industrial targets hidden deep in Germany. They threw up everything they had—an array of single-engined and twin-engined fighters and even the Stukas, originally made to frighten Frenchmen into their trenches—not to do aerial battle. There were their desperate eleventh-hour gadgets — tow-bombs, rocket planes.

"The enemy fighters started their attack over Holland at the Zuider Zee—in spite of our escort (500 fighters) they came at us in bunches," said Brig. Gen. Robert Travis of Savannah, Ga., leader of one formation.

Perfect Day for Bombing

"Our first attack was from four Focke Wulfs, the next from 30, then from 12. Then they just kept on coming. They attacked straight through our formation and from all angles without even rolling over."

The attack gathered intensity as the bombers fanned out toward Brunswick, Halberstadt and Oschersleben. As the factories came into bombardiers' sights, mechanisms clicked and, with a clank in the bomb bays, thousands of squat projectiles nosed down through 5 miles of thin air.

"It was a perfect day for bombing and we could see plenty of damage," said Lieut. John Raedeke of Waterville, Minn.

The German fighters hadn't saved their spawning places.

But to the rivet-gun hammering of thousands of American machine guns the Nazi rocket planes welled around like football lines or a naval flotilla and let fly with broadsides. Swifter enemy fighters zoomed in to follow up.

The sky was smudged thicker and thicker with black explosions. Jagged fragments of German steel zinged through layers of American duralumin, clanked against American armor plate—and slashed into American flesh.

"I saw our right-wing man go down in the smoke," said Waist Gunner Sergt. Everett E. Hudson, of West Point, Miss., "and when I looked out the other waist window our left-wing man was gone, too. It seemed as if planes were dropping like flies—our as well as theirs."

"We were at the back of the formation when we started," Raedeke said. "But every time a Fort would go down we would move up. By the time we got hit we were in the lead squadron."

"Those fighters were coming in frantically mad—and personally I was frantically scared," Bombardier Lieut. Walter Gibson of Lyndon, Ill., confessed.

Plane, Bomber Collide

The ninth German nailed by Raedeke's "Hit Parade" crew plunged out of control and hit a nearby Fortress which burst into flame and crashed down across "Hit Parade's" tail, shearing off most of the stabilizers.

"After a complete loop we went into a spin. I told the boys to bail out. Before they did I got the plane out of the spin. Five fighters were on our tail so I kept diving. Four of them dropped off and we went into a cloud. When we came out the other fighter was gone."

On a hundred other ships shells were smashing interphone lines over which men were frantically signaling. Fragments were cutting oxygen lines, sending men groping for emergency bottles. Forty-below gales froze gunners' faces and hands.

Bleeding men were lifted carefully into the protection of radio rooms. Their uniforms were cut away and sulfanilamide powder was poured into their wounds. Thick, muscular hands fumbled with tiny morphine needles.

The Germans kept after them most of the way back to the coast—two hours or more.

"There was a period of only three minutes from the time of the first attack until they left us when they were not around," General Travis said.

Dusk was gathering and the weather was thickening. In the nose of the "Hit Parade," Navigator Lieut. Edward Zimmerly of Socorro, N. M., lay flat on his face, peering through the glass for his home field.

Many set down at the first base they saw to get gas or aid the wounded.

Sixty of the bombers and five of the fighters didn't come back—less than half the casualties claimed in the hysterical communique from Hitler's headquarters—and only a third of the German casualties were admitted in the communique.

Most of the American fliers came back—battered but undaunted, to find new replacement planes and crews waiting on the runways for the next time—and to hear from the lips of high officials at home that they'd done a worthwile job.

LaGuardia Forgives Stunting Flier

One of the returning Fortress pilots was Lieut. Jack Wilson of Indianapolis, who startled a World Series crowd last fall by flying low and drawing the wrath of Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia of New York.

His plane was so battered that he ordered his crew to bail out when it arrived over England, he himself going on to land the ship safely. Yesterday, when LaGuardia heard of his feat he sent him this message: "All is forgiven. Congratulations."

U. S. Defenses Cut To Release Fighters

208 Survive

Destroyer Brownson Is Lost

The Navy reported yesterday that a destroyer sunk by Japanese planes at Cape Gloucester, New Britain, December 27, was the 2100-ton USS Brownson.

At the same time the Navy announced that there were 30 survivors of the USS Saint Augustine, a gunboat which was sunk off Cape May, N. J., January 6.

Next of kin of all casualties aboard the two ships have now been notified.

The sinking of the Brownson by enemy bombers during the landings of United States troops at Cape Gloucester previously was announced without the ship being named.

The Navy said that 208 members of her crew survived.

Built by the Bethlehem Steel Co. at Staten Island, N. Y., the Brownson was commissioned February 3, 1942. She was commanded by Comdr. Joseph Benedict Maher, 135 New Haven ave., Woodmont, Conn., who was among the survivors. His wife, Mrs. Ruth E. Maher, now lives at Hampton, Va.

Loss of the gunboat Saint Augustine was announced by the Fourth Naval District at Philadelphia the day after she sank.

American casualties since the start of the war now total more than 139,800. The Army losses total 105,229 and those of the Navy, Marine and Coast Guard 34,523.

Secretary of War Stimson, in reporting the Army casualties from the start of the war to December 23, said the figure represented 16,831 killed, 38,916 wounded, 24,067 missing, and 25,415 prisoners of war.

Casualties to American elements of the Fifth Army in Italy since the start of that campaign on September 9 are 18,119. Of this total 2798 were killed, 11,762 were wounded and 3559 were missing.

The Navy-Marine-Coast Guard casualties reported up to today are made up as follows: 15,186 killed, 6616 wounded, 8429 missing, 4292 prisoners of war.

32 States Joined In One Command, Stimson Says

By the Associated Press

The Army and Navy disclosed yesterday through Secretary of War Stimson a series of steps calculated to cut down home defense and build up the overseas striking force.

Stimson announced that military establishments in the coastal areas—both Atlantic and Pacific—are being reduced to augment the combat teams "now that the battle fronts have moved farther from our borders."

Eastern and Central Defense Commands were combined under Lieut. Gen. George Grunert, commander of the First Army, with headquarters in New York. The entire command now will encompass 16 Eastern States and the District of Columbia, and 16 inland States. This is designed to release manpower for the war fronts.

Stimson said it had been decided that the defense setup once considered necessary to ward off any invasion blow was outmoded by the turn of events in favor of the Allies. To maintain the same number of troops in this country henceforth would be "a waste of manpower," he said.

The shift caused speculation about the Army staff of the Central Defense Command under Lieut. Gen. Lloyd R. Fredendall, commander of the Second Army. This unit's duties henceforth will be carried out by the Eastern Command, "releasing those who have been on duty in the Central Defense Command for other duties."

Bombers Pound Jap Metal Plant, Bangkok RailYard

Headquarters Fourteenth U. S. Air Force in China, Jan. 13 (AP).—Unescorted Liberator bombers bombed the Japanese aluminum plant at Takao on the southwest coast of Formosa and the Bangkok railroad yards in Thailand in two night raids Tuesday, it was announced today.

It was the first blow at Bangkok, 1500 miles southwest of Formosa, by bombers from China bases.

Liberators swept 200 miles across Formosa Strait to make the second American raid on that island training ground and troop concentration center. They encountered no Japanese interceptors and all bombers were accounted for after the two raids.

American fighters, without a loss, Tuesday beat off an attempted attack on an American forward base, shooting down all the three fighters which accompanied the Japanese bombers.

Defender of Dreyfus And Wife Are Slain

New York, Jan. 13 (AP).—The Berlin radio said today that Dr. Victor Basch, 84-year-old former president of the French League for Defense of the Rights of Man, and his wife had been found "murdered" January 5 on a highway 6 miles from Lyon.

The broadcast gave no details. Basch was one of the defenders of the famous Alfred Dreyfuss.

CAP Loses 26 Men In Carrying Out Vital War Tasks

Boston, Jan. 13 (AP).—The Civil Air Patrol spotted 173 submarines, dropped bombs or depth charges at 57, sank or damaged at least 2 and located 363 survivors of ship sinkings or plane crashes before the group was made an auxiliary of the Army Air Force, the Massachusetts wing announced today. Other accomplishments:

Located 38 bodies at sea, found 17 floating mines, some in the path of troop ships; directed rescues of ships and aircraft in distress, lost 20 fliers in crashes or forced landings at sea, lost 6 members in land crashes, had 7 members seriously hurt in crack-ups and lost 90 planes either at sea or in wrecks.

President Persuades Rep. Gore To Keep Seat, Cancel Enlistment

By the Associated Press

Representative Albert Gore, Tennessee Democrat, was persuaded by President Roosevelt yesterday to remain in Congress rather than go into the Army.

The 36-year-old legislator who is married and a father volunteered for induction December 28.

It was understood that Gore was invited to the White House following the recent order by the President that members of Congress could not retain their seats and serve at the same time in the armed forces.

Following his conference with the Chief Executive, Gore said:

"He told me to say: 'You are needed here and can best serve here. I hope you will stay.' And who am I to say or gainsay where I can best serve? I stay."

Asked whether the President said anything to him about "the slender Democratic majority" in the House, Gore grinned and retorted: "You have my statement, gentlemen."

Although the Democrats still have more members in the House than the Republicans, the margin is so slim that they are one short of a numerical majority of the membership. Furthermore, a number of vacancies are to be filled and there is a possibility that Republicans might gain more of the empty seats than the Democrats.

As soon as the President issued his order Monday barring Congressmen from service in uniform, Gore tried to hand in his resignation as a House member to Speaker Rayburn. Rayburn, however, asked him to withhold that action until Gore had seen the President.

Still up in the air are the cases of Representative Jackson (Democrat) of Washington, now on active duty with the Army, and Representative Domengeaux (Democrat) of Louisiana, who has asked his local draft board to classify him in 1-A, subject to immediate induction.

Secretary Stimson indicated at his press conference yesterday that a new ruling would be made soon on the question of members of the armed forces becoming candidates for public office. The subject is now being studied by the joint Army-Navy personnel board, he said, to make certain that Army and Navy action will be consistent.

Fighting Words Open 4th Drive For War Bonds

Fighting words yesterday launched the Fourth War Loan drive on several fronts of the District, characterized by War Production Board Chief Donald Nelson's declaration that war bond purchases "will hasten the day that WPB is working like hell for."

In a brief ceremony in the Social Security Building auditorium to mark also Nelson's second anniversary with the agency, WPB employes were given a $993,685 goal in excess of present payroll deductions.

"We know that war is costly," Nelson said; "know it better, perhaps, than any other Washington bureau because we see the needs of each branch of the service.

Best Investment in World

"All that we are asked for in this drive is our money—not our lives. And we are asked only to lend that money, for the best investment in the world."

At the Kiwanis Club meeting at the Mayflower, Chairman John A. Reilly of the District War Finance Committee painted a vivid picture of what could happen to the value of the American dollar in postwar inflation, and urged members to promote war bond sales to avoid this evil.

"The war may be fought in vain unless inflation is prevented," Reilly said. "National income this year will be 148 billion dollars. After Federal, State and local taxes are deducted, 126 billion will remain to be saved or spent. Of this, 90 billion will be available for consumer purchase and 36 billion either will be saved or just frittered away.

Liquor Dealers Set Quota

"War bond purchases can siphon off excess purchasing power to save our Nation from the horrors experienced by Germany after World War I, when the value of the mark sank to one-trillionth of its original worth."

Sixty leaders of the District's liquor industry met at the Washington Hotel to set a three-million-dollar quota from retailers and wholesalers, who will serve as bond salesmen. Speaker was Corpl. Emory N. Gerbig, veteran of the Pacific theater now recuperating at the Army hospital at Forest Glen, Md., who said: "When a commanding officer gives orders in a battle, the soldier can have no excuses. Likewise the American people, when asked to back up our boys by buying bonds, should have no excuses."

Arlington Boy Writes Home Of Army Feast on Christmas

HERRLEIN

Servicemen's families who have worried that maybe Christmas was not all it should have been for their boys overseas may be as heartened as Mr. and Mrs. John F. Herrlein of 912 South Orme st., Arlington, Va., were by a letter received yesterday from Italy from their 21-year-old son, Buck.

Mr. and Mrs. Herrlein said they hadn't enjoyed their own Christmas celebration because they felt that the young Army Air Corps radio operator might have meager rations, without any of the traditional Christmas cheer. But the letter, written Christmas Day, dispelled all their worries, and they wanted to share it with other parents, through The Post.

Yule rations were hardly meager in Italy. Buck, who called it "the best dinner of my Army career," listed the menu:

"White turkey meat and dark, but before you go on, remember there was no one serving or rationing it out, we just helped ourselves to as much as we could possibly hold.

"Now to continue with the menu: Fresh mashed potatoes, dressing, green peas, string beans, carrots, cabbage, onions, radishes, apple pie, figs, almonds, apples, oranges, nuts, fresh bread, coffee and a pack of cigarettes. Can you imagine all of that food on a mess kit. I am so full that I probably won't have to eat for three days.

"I certainly hope that you poor civilians had a merry Christmas. All kidding aside, folks, I do wish you a very happy Xmas and New Year and maybe, mom, you will be able to cook the next turkey I eat."

Buck also wrote of a Christmas Eve mass "in one of the most beautiful cathedrals I have ever seen."

"The mass was strictly for the soldiers and it was said by an American chaplain, and I would not be surprised if some of the German army was in the cathedral, for there were representatives from every other army in this theater. That midnight mass will be one of the services that I shall never forget, and I wouldn't have missed it for the world."

Young Herrlein, a Washington native, played on the Western High School football team which won the interhigh championship in the 1939-40 season. He was a cable splicer for the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. when Pearl Harbor came, and enlisted the day war was declared. Overseas since August, 1942, he's been in Ireland, England, Scotland, North Africa, and now Italy.

Way Is Paved For Sanctions On Bolivia

The Foreign Economic Administration yesterday tightened controls on exports to Bolivia, thereby making possible the future imposition of economic sanctions on the new Bolivian regime which took power last month after a six-hour revolt.

In a notice to 16,000 exporters, the FEA suspended operation of its "decentralization plan" with respect to Bolivia, in effect denying that country a "preliminary voice" in determining what goods are to be shipped from this country.

Exporters Notified

A bulletin sent out the exporters stated: "In the light of existing conditions, all export license applications for shipments to Bolivia will be carefully considered by FEA to determine that the particular exportation is in the interests of the war effort of the United Nations."

The "decentralization plan" has been operating since last spring to enable Latin American governments to issue "import recommendations" designating types and quantities of goods they would like to receive. Under the "good neighbor" policy, considerable weight has been given to these recommendations, although the procedure did not eliminate the need for licenses from FEA.

Not Actual Sanctions

An FEA spokesman emphasized that the action did not amount to imposition of economic sanctions, but it was understood that the new ruling could be administered in such a way as to be tantamount to the imposition of sanctions. Whether this is to be done is regarded as a policy question for the State Department to determine.

At the same time, FEA cautioned exporters to Bolivia to use "due prudence" and keep informed "concerning any exchange control or import regulations governing transactions with Bolivian importers."

The suspension naturally would not affect Bolivia's right as a sovereign nation to restrict or block the importation of unwanted goods.

The action was based on the theory that "import recommendations" from a government that is not recognized by the United States could have no standing with an agency of the American Government.

The bulletin, signed by S. H. Lebensburger, director of FEA's requirements and supply branch, termed the action "temporary."

Import recommendations issued by the Bolivian government that was in existence prior to the revolution will continue to be processed, the bulletin said.

The "import recommendation" device is available to all Latin American countries except Argentina and now Bolivia. Argentina is covered by a different procedure which accomplishes approximately the same result as the "decentralization plan" procedure just denied to Bolivia.

President Returns To Treasury $1950 Of $75,000 Salary

By the Associated Press

President Roosevelt turned back to the Treasury $1950 of his $75,000 salary in 1942 under his order limiting salaries after taxes to $25,000 a year.

This was disclosed yesterday in the Budget Bureau's table of receipts for the fiscal year 1943, sent to Congress along with the President's budget message.

The President's order limiting salaries was issued in October, 1942, but subsequently was nullified by Congress. While aimed generally at holding salaries to $25,000 after taxes, it also made allowance for certain fixed obligations, including insurance payments.

J. A. Stillman, N. Y. Banker, Is Dead at 70

New York, Jan. 13 (AP).—James A. Stillman, 70, a director of the National City Bank of New York and central figure in a sensational divorce case in the 1920's, died here today. He had been ill a week.

Stillman was elected president of the bank in 1919, but resigned two years later when he and his wife, Anne Urquhart "Fifi" Potter, entered 10 years of divorce litigation.

She later married Fowler McCormick, grandson of John D. Rockefeller, 18 years her junior.

Stillman had been married 20 years to 'Fifi" when he charged her with infidelity.

Filed Counter Charges

She denied his charges and countered with an accusation that he had had improper relations with Florence Leeds, former chorus girl and that he was the father of the dancer's son.

A referee held Stillman guilty of adultery and cleared Mrs. Stillman of all her husband's charges.

An Appellate Court in 1923 awarded her $7500 a month alimony and $15,000 counsel fees. She began suit for divorce in 1925, but six weeks later the case was withdrawn. The Stillmans took a trip to Europe, then bought a new home on Park ave.

Obtained Secret Decree

Five years after the reunion, however, she obtained a secret decree on statutory grounds at Poughkeepsie. The decree became final on June 4, 1931, and Mrs. Stillman the next day married McCormick. She was 51 at that time and McCormick 33.

Stillman was born in New York and a Harvard graduate. He is survived by three sons, Navy Lieut. Alexander Stillman, James Alexander Stillman of the Army Medical Corps and Navy Lieut. Guy Stillman, and a daughter, Mrs. Anne Stillman Davidson of Glen Cove, N. Y.

Owen C. Ryon

Funeral services for Owen C. Ryon, 78, retired police sergeant, who died at Sibley Hospital Wednesday night, will be held tomorrow at 2 p. m. at the Ryan funeral home at 317 Pennsylvania ave. se. Burial will be in Congressional Cemetery.

Born in Nottingham, Md., Sergeant Ryon was appointed to the Metropolitan Police Force in June of 1892. His service record showed two commendations, one in June, 1924, when he saved the life of a woman who was trapped in a burning building, and the other in 1909, when he captured two men who were operating a still. Retired January 21, 1926, Sergeant Ryon served in the Fifth, Ninth and Eleventh Precincts.

He is survived by three daughters, Mrs. Florence M. Robertson, Mrs. Annie E. Drury and Mrs. Jessie L. Gill, all of Washington; two sons, Louis O. Ryon of Washington and Owen C. Ryon, jr., of Forrestville, Md.; and six grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

Mrs. Lulah M. Mansfield

Funeral services for Mrs. Lulah May Mansfield, 67, who died Tuesday at her home, 4119 Brandywine st. nw., will be held at 2 p. m. today in the Eldbrook Methodist Church, 4100 River rd. nw., with interment in Forest Hill Cemetery, Gaithersburg, Md.

The wife of Clinton Mansfield, an engineer for Woodward & Lothrop, Mrs. Mansfield lived at the Brandywine st. home for nearly 30 years. She was born in Maryland, and was an active member of the Eldbrook Church and the Daughters of America.

Surviving, beside Mr. Mansfield, are a sister, Miss Maude Crown; a brother, Thomas Crown, and a niece, Mrs. Anna Bunting.

Adm. Carpender, Adm. Kauffman Get Decorations

Rear Admiral Arthur S. Carpender, 2325 Tracy pl. nw., and Rear Admiral James L. Kauffman of 2928 Courtland pl. nw., have been awarded the Legion of Merit, the Navy Department announced yesterday.

Admiral Carpender, a native of New Brunswick, N. J., who recently became commandant of the Ninth Naval District, was decorated for his services as commander of the Southwest Pacific Force from September 11, 1942, to November 266, 1943. During that time, his citation said, "he employed the forces under his command with such proficient skill that many difficult operations were successfully accomplished and many important areas were effectually liberated from Japanese occupation."

Admiral Kauffman, a native of Miamisburg, Ohio, was cited for services as commandant of the Seventh Naval District and commander of the Gulf Sea Frontier.

Court Dismisses Lawyer's Charges Against 3 Justices

In an action almost unprecedented here, Attorney James J. Laughlin has accused three justices of the United States Court of Appeals with bias and prejudice toward him personally, and the affidavit containing these charges was thrown out by the court as being without the scope of the law.

Laughlin's accusations were directed at Justices Justin Miller, Henry W. Edgerton and Thurman Arnold, whom he accused of hostility toward him, lack of concern, engaging in laughter and levity, and exhibiting lack of judicial deportment.

This week, Chief Justice Lawrence D. Groner defended the action of his colleagues and dismissed the affidavit on the basis that the section of the United States Code under which an affidavit of bias and prejudice can be filed provided for charges made in reference to a client and not to an attorney.

The case involved was a bankruptcy proceeding and Laughlin says due consideration was not given to a reply brief and affidavit filed in the case nor to a motion to reconsider. In a later statement he said his reference to Edgerton applied only to Edgerton's participation in the ruling to dismiss the motion to reconsider.

Mrs. Vickery to Sponsor New Escort Carrier

Mrs. Howard L. Vickery of 4420 Dexter st. nw. has been designated by Secretary of the Navy Knox as sponsor for the USS Saginaw Bay, an escort carrier. Mrs. Vickery is the wife of Rear Admiral Howard L. Vickery, USN, vice chairman of the Maritime Commission.

The Saginaw Bay is scheduled to be launched Wednesday by the Kaiser company at Vancouver, Wash.

Brazilians Coffeeless

Rio de Janeiro, Jan. 13 (AP).—Brazil, coffee center of the world, witnessed the strange sight today of housewives standing in line to buy a half-pound allowance. Even at that, grocers said they were unable to keep coffee in stock because the roasters did not supply enough. The roasters are negotiating for a raise in the price ceiling.

Synthetic Tires For Civilian Use Will Be Delayed

Rubber Director Bradley Dewey said last night that scheduled 1944 production of 30 million synthetic rubber tires for civilian use probably will be met, but he declared increased military demands will for the most part put off their manufacture "until late in the year."

Colonel Dewey indicated this to mean the last six months of '44, in which case, tires which might have been replaced in the spring will have to serve until fall.

Demands by the military for additional heavy-duty tires, military sources said, is attributable to the stepped-up bomber production program and the increased use of "ducks"—amphibious vehicles—in landing operations.

WPB Vetoes Plan For Civilian Goods

Decision Reached To Avoid Possible Indirect Effects

The War Production Board yesterday frowned on preinvasion authorization of large-scale resumption of civilian goods production.

A policy statement, issued in the name of J. A. Krug, WPB vice chairman for operations, announced that the agency had turned down the recommendation of its steel division to relax or abrogate its order forbidding the use of iron and steel in 646 common civilian items, and commented:

"Mr. Krug indicated that this action can properly be interpreted as the WPB's attitude toward the expansion of nonessential civilian production at the present time."

The statement emphasized that the action was taken, not because of a shortage of steel but because of the possible indirect effect on other items.

Invasion to Guide Policy

Observers believed that the WPB was giving voice to what has quietly become an important Government policy—to take no major step "on the road back" until the promised invasion of the European fortress occurs, presenting an opportunity for a better survey of the military picture.

Army and Navy officials are known to have opposed revocation of such restrictions until the military situation clarifies.

Current activity with respect to postwar planning is regarded as in the nature of preparation for large-scale resumption of civilian activity later on. It has been estimated that war production will drop 35 per cent after the termination of hostilities in Europe, leaving ample room for considerable civilian production.

Decision at All-Day Session

The decision to retain the Steel-conservation order unchanged was reached at an all-day session of the WPB committee on clearance of orders.

While the use of steel in nonessential items will continue under ban, the committee said that steel would soon be released to improve the quality of essential civilian goods now being made from substitute materials.

The policy statement explained that there is no steel shortage. (Recently the steel industry has curtailed operations for lack of orders.)

However, it was pointed out that relaxation of the order restricting steel uses in banned civilian goods would contribute indirectly to shortages of other war materials. Coal, petroleum, lumber for crating, packaging paper and transportation are all short of war requirements, the committee said, and extended production of steel civilian goods would absorb additional quantities of these scarce commodities.

By Distillers

Probers Hear Of Vineyard 'Invasion'

By International News Service

The Senate Liquor Investigating Committee heard a suggestion yesterday that the "big four" distillers constitute a "big, bad wolf" which is swallowing up the natural wine industry of California.

Chairman Frederick Van Nuys (Democrat), Indiana, whose group is pledged to break the wartime whisky bottleneck, named the "big four" as National Distillers, Schenley, Seagrams and Hiram Walker as testimony indicated they were moving into the California wine industry.

Van Nuys listed the "big four" after he had angrily told Edward A. Wooton, Washington representative of the California Wine Institute, that the latter failed to investigate "tie in" sales of wine with whisky because the huge distillers had men on his board.

Wooton testified that 395 California wineries, owned by 175 operators, are members of the Wine Institute.

In the past five years, the dapper, soft-spoken witness continued, the "big four" have taken over about 20 per cent of California wine production by buying old established wineries.

Wooton admitted that the "big four" now have two of the institute's six officers and three of its 20 directors.

C. B. Cella, former head of Roma Wines, and Lee Jones of Scheewan-Jones, were National's representatives on the board, Wooton said.

Next he named C. B. Cella, former president of Italian-Swiss Colony Wines, as the Schenley representative.

The chairman asked the witness if he had heard complaints from his members and other vintners that the "big four" were "muscling in" on the wineries in order to seize control of alcohol to blend with whisky.

Wooton shook his head, and Van Nuys said he had received scores of complaints that the working man of the Pacific Coast was now paying twice as much for his table wines as he was two years ago—and facing a drought, to boot.

"Take a day off and come to our office and read the 150 letters we have received," Van Nuys advised the witness.

In a letter read into the record, Executive Secretary H. A. Savage, of the Muskat Grape Growers Association of California, charged openly that the big distillers were influencing the Office of Price Administration and the War Food Administration with an "uncanny and unseen power."

"Prices that have been set on wines and brandies justify paying growers $100 a ton for grapes," wrote Savage.

Wooton said the OPA had set grape price ceilings for food and similar purposes but they did not apply to grapes for wineries, where the average price was $77 against a $28.80 to $42 a ton ceiling for nonwine purposes.

Fighter Output Of Germany Cut 40%, Spaatz Says

Air Marshal Richard Peck of Great Britain and Lieut. Gen. Carl Spaatz of the U. S. Army Air Forces were interviewed yesterday in a transatlantic press conference broadcast here over the Blue Network.

Replying to a query from Associated Press' John M. Hightower, Spaatz, commander of the American strategic bombing force for western Europe declared that 40 per cent of Germany's fighter plane production was knocked out by Allied bombing during the last part of 1943.

And, the British Air Marshal said, 20 of Germany's 90 largest production cities have been put out of commission for some time to come."

Arrnaged by the National Press Club, the interview was conducted on this side of the ocean by Kingsbury Smith of International News Service, Reuel S. Moore of United Press, and Hightower.

Father Indicted On Murder Charge In Baby's Death

Pittsfield, Mass., Jan. 13 (AP).—John Franklin Noxon, jr., 47-year-old corporation lawyer, was indicted on a charge of first-degree murder today in the electrocution, September 22, of his 6-month-old abnormal son, Lawrence.

Noxon, who is held in jail, will be arraigned next week. Medical Examiner Dr. Albert C. England quoted Noxon as saying that he was puttering with a radio and the baby was on a chair nearby. Later Noxon went to get some tools, but, because the baby was wet he placed the child on a metal tray on the floor, the statement continued.

When he returned to the room, Noxon's story continued, he noticed something burning and saw the extension cord of a "trouble light" looped over the baby's left arm.

NLRB Agrees To Strike Vote At Kaiser Plant

Los Angeles, Jan. 13 (AP).—The National Labor Relations Board has authorized a strike vote of AFL Metal Trades Union members at the new Henry J. Kaiser steel plant at Fontana, Calif., January 30.

The AFL unions called for the vote in dissatisfaction over the results of a recent Labor Board election at the plant, employing more than 2000 persons, which granted the CIO United Steel Workers bargaining rights for production and maintenance workers.

The AFL contended that challenged ballots would have changed the result of the election.

St. Louis, Jan. 13 (AP).—CIO United Automobile Workers laid down two conditions at a meeting today for ending a strike which has virtually suspended production of piston rings for military aircraft at two plants owned by the McQuay-Norris Manufacturing Co.

The War Labor Board had ordered the employes to return to work at once in compliance with labor's no-strike pledge.

The union, however, voted to take no action on the order until the management had lifted the suspension of Clarence Horner, union president, and had agreed to bargain through the Federal conciliation service ono other issues, including a request for higher wages.

The company has announced today that Horner will be permitted to return to work Monday. He was suspended for tearing down company posters, which he contended misrepresented the results of a strike vote under the Smith-Connally Act.

Flu Death Wave Now Receding, Bureau Reports

The death wave that swept the country for five consecutive weeks as a result of the influenza epidemic hit a peak with the new year and began to recede last week, the Census Bureau reported yesterday.

The number of mortalities reported by major cities showed a 7 per cent decline during the week, with decreases noted in every section except the West Coast. Deaths there were 11.9 per cent above the preceding week.

Aggregate mortalities in the 36 reporting cities were 31.5 per cent above the three-year average for the corresponding week. In the preceding week deaths were 50.4 per cent higher than the average.

GOP Group Demands Tax Simplification

House Republicans called yesterday for simplification of income tax returns so that "persons of ordinary intelligence" can fill them out without expert legal help.

The conference unanimously adopted a resolution offered by Knutson (Republican), Minnesota, which demanded that the Treasury "take immediate steps to accede to the universal demand for such action."

Chairman Doughton (Democrat), North Carolina, announced last week that income tax simplification will be the No. 1 assignment of his tax-drafting Ways and Means Committee for this year.

Republican Leader Martin of Massachusetts said that the GOP conference listened with "enthusiasm" to a report by Representative Halleck (Republican), Indiana, chairman of the Republican Congressional Committee, on the Chicago meeting of the Republican National Committee.

Budget Revenue Request

Meanwhile, President Roosevelt's urgent budget message request for $10,500,000,000 more revenue went to a Congress virtually committed to a $2,275,600,000 new tax program.

The Senate is prepared to give final attention today to revenue sections of the bill, which already has passed the House carrying about 130 million dollars less money. Senators tentatively approved most revenue features of the 190-page measure yesterday without any indication of a move to increase the rates.

Acting Republican Leader White of Maine said he saw no chance of raising the full $10,500,000,000, and Senator Davis of Pennsylvania, a Republican member of the Finance Committee, declared:

"This old tax turkey's been picked pretty bare. We're going to have to let it grow a few new feathers and put a little fat on its bones."

Finance Chairman George (Democrat) of Georgia on Wednesday told the Senate "We have about reached the bottom of the barrel as far as existing taxes are concerned . . . all . . . new sources have been frowned upon by the Treasury."

A. J. Altmeyer, Social Security Board chairman, declared yesterday that freezing of the Social Security tax at the present rate of 1 per cent during 1944—already voted by the Senate—would create a moral obligation for Congress to "subsidize" old-age pension recipients in the future by more than $1,500,000,000.

The American Federation of Labor joined Altmeyer in pleading before the House Ways and Means Committee that the rate be allowed to increase automatically to 2 per cent as of January 1.

Lewis G. Hines, AFL legislative representative, said "old-age and survivors insurance is to wage-earners what individual insurance policies are to those who can afford them."

The Senate voted Tuesday, 47 to 17, to freeze the tax through 1944 and the House committee opened hearings yesterday on the proposition. Representative Knutson (Republican) of Minnesota, ranking minority member of the committee, predicted the House would sustain the Senate action.

Loss to Government

Altmeyer testified that the Government, which must pay the social security benefits, will lose $1,400,000,000 this year if the tax is not allowed to increase as provided by law.

"From the standpoint of equity, as well as from the standpoint of financial soundness," he said, "it is essential that the automatic increase in the contribution rate be permitted to go into effect.

"It is also interesting to note that three leading newspapers which previously advocated freezing the rate now advocate that the automatic increase be permitted to take effect. These are the Wall Sreet Journal, the New York Times, and The Washington Post."

Small Firms Get Contracts For 14 Million

By Walter Wood

Maury Maverick, new chairman of the Smaller War Plants Corporation, yesterday promised to help maintain "a free enterprise economy" now and after the war and backed up the pledge by giving 14 million dollars in business to small manufacturers of shoes and clothing to be used by peoples in liberated areas overseas.

The former Texas Congressman, interviewed on the second day of his new job, showed a vigorous desire to carry out SWPC's obligations. Maverick said he was "anxious to do something worth while for the country, so when the boys come marching home there will be jobs for them—and not chaos."

Losing no time getting the ball rolling, Maverick, less than 48 hours after being elected to the chairmanship, executed with the Foreign Economic Administration the largest SWPC prime contract in dollar value to date.

7 Million Pairs of Shoes

The contract calls for the manufacture of seven million pairs of men's, women's and children's shoes at $10,500,000 for shipment to overseas areas where rehabilitation is getting underway.

A second $3,500,000 contract is for 220,000 articles of clothing, also for foreign use.

Maverick plans to make a trip over the Nation soon to talk with operators of small war plants and better learn their problems.

He also said he will consult with the Small Business Committees of the House and Senate and declared his objectives were to "carry out the intentions of Congress and to be cooperative in maintaining a free enterprise economy."

"One of the things that must be done in America," the Texan said, "is to preserve the 'middle class'—which is nearly everybody."

Informed that the War Manpower Commission had ordered its regional directors, now meeting in Washington, to assist SWPC in stimulating the letting of subcontracts, Maverick viewed it as the "beginning of an effort to help as much as possible small business throughout the country."

Roosevelt Asks 100 Billions To Finance War Into 1945

On the plethora of current domestic issues, he urged upon Congress:

1. That Congress approve "at least" the 10½ billion minimum tax program laid down by the Treasury in October, 1943: "The time to impose high taxes is now when incomes are high and goods are scarce."
2. That legislators free the war contract renegotiation law of proposed Senate modifications that would restrict if not destroy the present law's curb on excessive war profits.
3. THAT Congress "unfreeze" the increase in Social Security payroll tax increase that was slated for January 1 which has already been frozen for 60 days and which the Senate has just voted to freeze for the full year.
4. That present levels of wages, farm prices and profits "should be exceeded only in rare cases of special war requirements and not by attempts of pressure groups to promote their special interests."
5. That "the judicious use of subsidies is necessary if consumer prices are to be kept from rising, I repeat again."
6. Extension at the present time of the coverage of the Federal old-age and survivors insurance system to many groups not covered now, and expansion of the scope of the system to include disability benefits.

Urges Close Integration

In the postwar field, the President urged a closely integrated demobilization program, with concerted efforts by industry, labor and Government toward a permanently high level of national income.

To develop a coordinated program for contract termination, disposal of the war's vast Government surplus property, and industrial reconversion, he said a war and postwar adjustment unit already has been established in the Office of War Mobilization. He said a Joint Contract Termination Board also has been set up in that office, and recommendations are now in preparation.

For the demobilization period, he urged maintenance of a unified national employment and counseling service, with provision for job retraining, education and rehabilitation supplementing the placement service.

Need for Public Works

In addition to a reconversion policy aimed at stimulation of private investment and employment, he said there will be urgent need for public works to provide both needed new facilities and jobs. He said he has asked various Federal agencies to make detailed plans for postwar Federal public works, with the Budget Bureau coordinating the advance preparation of the program.

Then he reminded Congress of his "minimum program" for aiding discharged servicemen and women, ranging from mustering-out pay to educational and training measures for veterans. To this he added a proposal for "Federal unemployment allowances" for members of the armed forces.

In "reinforcing and extending" the framework of unemployment insurance to meet demobilization adjustments, he asked Congress also to provide unemployment insurance for maritime workers and "a temporary system" of unemployment insurance for Government warworkers, who have been unable to build up rights under the existing system.

War Production High

The President told Congress the United States has now attained superiority in war production, in output of munitions alone now almost equaling the rest of the world combined. Today he said America has excess supplies in some types of munitions, but deficiencies in others; that where contracts are canceled, the same contractor often receives more urgent orders. He promised to release facilities for civilian production when they are no longer needed "but only when we are sure that by so doing we will not impair the war effort."

But while the first urgent demands for munitions have eased, the President told Congress that 1944 will be more critical than ever on the food front "in view of increasing food requirements for our armed forces, our Allies, and the starving populations" in territories being reoccupied.

Support Prices Charted

With approval of War Stabilizer Vinson and the cooperation of Price Administrator Bowles, the President said War Food Administrator Jones has prepared a full schedule of support prices for war crops and other critical commodities to encourage 1944 production of the quantities desired of each crop, without increasing the general level of farm prices. He warned Congress that carrying out of this program must depend on congressional extension of the Commodity Credit Corporation, recently given only an abbreviated lease on life while Congress debates subsidy action.

In carrying relief and rehabilitation to liberated areas abroad, he said the job at the outset will be a military one but civilian administration will move in as soon as feasible. Legislation now pending, he said, will permit the United States "to make its proportionate contribution." This contribution was not covered in the budget, but has been estimated at an ultimate $1,356,000,000.

The message sent to the House (the Senate was in recess) anticipates $99,769,000,000 total of Federal outlays in fiscal 1945 (June 30, 1944, to June 30, 1945), slightly more than revised estimates for the current fiscal year.

Strictly war spending would drop two billion dollars to a 90-billion-dollar total for the next fiscal year.

Only 17 billion dollars in specific recommendations for appropriations were immediately forwarded to Congress, of which only seven billion dollars was for war. As last year, the remaining recommendations for war purposes will not be submitted until spring, when they can be made to conform with the shifting war pattern.

Actually, over-all, the President asked 70 billion dollars in new appropriations, plus reappropriation of 38 billion dollars in unused money, to bring total 1945 fiscal year appropriation estimates to 108 billion dollars. Estimated current fiscal year appropriations and reappropriations totaled seven billion dollars more.

The President explained there is always a lag—particularly in war procurement—between appropriations and expenditures, the latter often spreading over more than one fiscal year.

More for Nonwar Items

One of the most striking features of the estimates was the increase in provision for nonwar spending, while war estimates took their first turn on the downside.

This occurred despite rigid trimming of some nonwar agencies, with estimates for the Agriculture Department dropping approximately 314 million dollars to a 659-billion-dollar total.

This was attributed to the emergence of another group of expenditures—slated to become the dominant factor in future budgets—interest on the debt, veterans' benefits and refunds on war taxes.

In this aftermath-of-war category came a $1,252,000,000 estimate for veterans' pensions, a jump from 865 million dollars from this year, and $3,750,000,000 for interest on the public debt, a $1,100,000,000 increase.

Spending Trails Behind

The new budget estimates project a total war program since the war's start of 397 billion dollars in appropriation and contract authorizations, but actual spending will not catch up with this figure until some future fiscal year. Through December of last year, only 153 billion dollars had been spent, and by June 30 of this year the war-spending total was estimated at 202 billion dollars. By June 30, 1945, the end of the next fiscal year, this will rise to about 291 billion dollars.

Crowding Statutory Limit

With revenues (estimated at less than the current year's 41 billion dollars) lagging far behind spending (estimated 59 billion dollars in excess of next year's net Government receipts), the message showed the public debt about to burst through the statutory limit.

The President said the public debt will reach 198 billion dollars by June 30 of this year and climb to 258 billion dollars by June 30, 1945. He said he soon will have to ask Congress to increase the present 210-billion-dollar debt limit.

The war's "legacy of postwar debt" will cost five billion dollars annually in gross interest payments by the end of the next fiscal year, the President reminded Congress. He said this annual interest drain on the Treasury "need not prove oppressive" if national income is held at a level of 125 billion dollars or more.

"I am confident," he told Congress, "that we can devise a tax structure and other appropriate economic policies which will permit both payment of interest, and gradual repayment of principal during years of prosperity, without impairing the stability and growth of the national income.

Many Needs Unestimated

Many of the postwar measures advocated by the President in his message carried no accompanying budget estimates. Nothing was listed for mustering-out pay for veterans, now authorized in legislation half-way through Congress, or to pay for the many other recommended aids to veterans. Presumably supplemental estimates will be transmitted to Congress as the legislation is enacted.

Also unreflected in the budget figures were the millions that will be necessary to extend the Administration's consumer food subsidy program, since this would be paid largely out of CCC balances.

Budget officials also made clear that the estimate of 41 million dollars in net Federal revenues for the next fiscal year was based only on existing taxes. Thus the $2,200,000,000 plus provided in the pending tax bill, although eight billion dollars less than the President asked, must be added, when enacted, to the President's estimate of revenues. Operating as a partial offset to this was the tax bill's forthcoming "freeze" of Social Security payroll taxes. In figuring his budget, the President counted in receipts from the scheduled increase in these rates.

Backs Tax Simplification

In addition to plugging for more taxes, to narrow gaping deficits and aid him in his price-wage stabilization fight on inflation, the President struck a resoudingly more popular note: "I also recommend tax simplification to reduce the burdens of compliance of the many millions of taxpayers by elimination of returns where feasible. . . ."

While budgeting 18 months ahead on the assumption that the war will last that long or longer, the President told Congress he is certain that this period "will be crucial in the history of the United States and mankind, a period which will see decisive action in this global war."

He was submitting therefore a "tentative" budget, he said, which was based on the only safe military assumption that the war will last through the full period.

"If the war should continue on all fronts throughout the fiscal year 1945 or longer, we shall be prepared," he said. "If an unfavorable turn in military events should result in an increased demand for munitions, we shall, with available facilities, pour out even more munitions than scheduled, and expenditures will be larger.

"If, on the other hand, victory should be achieved on one of the major fronts earlier than assumed, I assure the Congress and the Nation that war production will be promptly adjusted to the changed requirements, and war expenditures in the fiscal year 1945 may be less than estimated at the present time.

"Because of (contract) termination payments, mustering out pay, and similar demobilization expenditures, however, the reduction in cash expenditures will of necessity lag considerably behind any curtailment of war production."

Danes Kill Gestapo Agent

Stockholm, Jan. 13 (AP).—Danish patriots shot and killed a Gestapo agent today when Germans raided a Copenhagen home to round up a ring of saboteurs, a Copenhagen dispatch said tonight. Five of the saboteurs were reported arrested.

Bill Would Raise Protocol Status Of U.S. Staff Chiefs

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

A bill to give new ranks to the four American members of the combined chiefs of staff so as to bring them up to what might be termed "protocol equality" with their British counterparts will be introduced in Congress within a few days, Representative Carl Vinson (Democrat) of Georgie, chairman of the House Naval Affairs Committee, said last night.

Mr. Vinson said it had not been determined what new titles would be designated for the four, who are Gen. George C. Marshall, Chief of Staff, United States Army; Admiral Ernest J. King, commander in chief, United States Fleet and chief of naval operations; Admiral William D. Leahy, chief of staff to the Commander in Chief, and Gen. Henry H. Arnold, commanding general, Army Air Forces.

Because of the workings of protocol, with all its fine distinctions as to who ranks whom and who shall sit where, both General Marshall and Admiral King, for example, are placed in the anomalous position of being "junior" to their British counterparts on the combined chiefs of staff.

Sinatra's Tie Sold to Man For $50,000 in Bonds

New York, Jan. 13 (AP).—Frank Sinatra's blue-silver bow tie has been sold for $50,000 in war bonds—to a man.

The purchaser was Irving Geist, a woman's apparel manufacturer, who hasn't worn the crooner's tie yet.

Bill Offered To Outlaw War Strikes

strikes and slowdowns during the war.

Such legislation was advocated by a Senator formerly connected with labor legislation after a high official—reportedly Gen. George C. Marshall—had denounced the steel strike and Government seizure of the railroads as bolstering Axis morale. The Senator indicated Congress would be faced with the necessity of passing national service legislation or tightening labor curb.

More recently it became known, just before the President delivered his message calling for national war service, that his advisers were advocating an amendment to the Connally-Smith law to outlaw strikes for the duration. The present law's criminal penalties apply only to strikes aganist Government-held plants.

Those advisers who advocated tighter curbs on strikes also were in favor of penalties to be provided against employers who refused to obey orders of the War Labor Board, so that employers could not coerce unions which could not strike.

Smith Has No Objection

Questioned on this point yesterday, Smith indicated that he had no objection to such an amendment were it offered to his bill.

The measure was referred to the House Labor Committee. On both sides of Congress, however, antistrike bills have been reported out of other committees, instead of from the Labor Committee, leading to the belief that the Smith measure, or one similar in character, might reach the floor by way of the Military or Naval Committeese. The Military Committee on the House side last summer reported out the Smith bill, which later became the Smith-Connally law.

The Virginia representative pointed out yesterday that his new bill had actually passed the House by a two to one vote on two separate occasions, one in the Smith antistrike bill introduced before Pearl Harbor and again in the Smith bill which passed the House last June.

Both times the provisions found in this measure were killed in the Senate.

Provisions of Measure

Under the new bill, the local union involved in a strike, slowdown or concerted stoppage of work could not appear as bargaining agent before the National Labor Relations Board or the War Labor Board.

Unexpected opposition to national service legislation introduced by Senator Austin (Republican) of Vermont and Representative Wadsworth (Republican) of New York, developed yesterday when Senator Truman (Democrat) of Missouri, chairman of the Senate's War Investigating Committee, declared against it.

Truman, long regarded as an Administration supporter, said he would oppose a civilian labor draft "unless something very convincing can be presented to show there is need for it.

"As a matter of fact," he asserted, "we're at the peak of the manpower problem now and we can expect it to ease before long." His committee has previously charged that some war industries had horded labor.

anticipation of orders which were never received.

2. Actual cutbacks in munitions requirements as a result of changing strategy.

3. Better utilization of manpower, permitting the accomplishment of more production with the same work force.

McNutt Will "Fight"

At Louisville, McNutt said he would "fight" for the inclusion of the following principles in any national service law:

"1. Manpower is a problem of community organization. Broad discretion should be left to the State and to the community to tailor the local manpower program to local needs.

"2. Cooperation between management and labor underlie the administration of any manpower law, just as it bulwarks the voluntary system.

"3. The main problem is not to have the power. It is to have the facilities and the technical organization to administer that power wisely.

"4. A law should be democratically administered. It must protect both worker and employer against arbitrary action. In the interest of efficient production it must recognize a maximum freedom of choice compatible with the emergency.

"5. A law should recognize that authority brings obligation toward those whose lives have been controlled and toward their families.

"6. A law should not be used to cloak inequity, injustice or incompetence on the part of either management or labor, when those conditions impede the war effort."

Chevy Chase Flier Killed in Crash Of Bomber in Iowa

Sergt. Frank T. Coleman, 20, of 7105 Chatham rd., Chevy Chase Md., was one of the four Army aviators killed when their bomber crashed and burned near the Sioux City (Iowa) airport Wednesday night. Three of the seven crew members were injured.

Sergeant Coleman was radioman-gunner on the bomber. He won his wings at Salt Lake City, Utah, last summer, after entering the Army Air Force a year ago. He graduated from Bethesda-Chevy Chase High School, and attended Colgate University.

He was the son of Mrs. Martins W. Coleman of the Chevy Chase address and Lawrence B. Coleman, director of the American Museums Association in New York. Besides his parents Sergeant Coleman is survived by two brothers, Ensign Kenyon Coleman, 24, USN, now stationed at San Diego, Calif., and Richard P. Coleman, 16.

swung west of Mozyr and captured Zimovischche Moseyevka, 9 miles west of Mozyr. More than 40 towns were taken in the day's advances.

Kalinkovichi, a junction on the Leningrad-Odessa north-south railway and the Moscow-Pinsk east-west line, was the most important objective of Rokossovsky's current push.

Its capture—which appeared imminent—would hasten the clearing of the Berdichev-Zhlobin rail link which the Russians need to increase communications between their White Russian and Ukrainian drives. The Russians hold the portion from Berdichev to Ovruch and a section between Kalinkovichi and Zhlobin, but still must clear the Germans from Yelsk, Mozyr Station, Kalinkovichi and Zholbin.

Gen. Ivan S. Konev's second Ukrainian army continued to advance slowly west and northwest of Kirovograd, improving its positions.

To the southeast, the German position in the Dnieper River bend grew steadily worse, although the narrowing escape corridor for the Smela-Kanev area still was being held open.

The Germans were in danger, however, of having the Russians cross the southern Bug River and rip into their Dnieper Bend defenses from the rear.

German accounts told of strong Soviet attacks at the bridgehead north of Kerch, southwest of Cherkasy and west of Kirovograd, but asserted all were repulsed. The German radio said some of the hardest recent fighting had been around Kirovograd, where it contended the Russians lost 266 tanks in five days. On all fronts, it claimed the Russians had lost 2000 tanks since mid-December.

No change was noted in the headquarters communique today in the fighting around Cape Gloucester, New Britain, where American Marines were reported Thursday to be slowly pushing the Japanese south of Borgen Bay.

AME Zion Church Bishops Council Hears Dean Hastie

Dean William H. Hastie of Howard University Law School last night told the Bishops Council of the A. M. E. Zion Church, which he addressed at Galbraith Church, that planning of church activities for the postwar period should start now.

Praising its work, he urged the council to extend its activities to help a race which can "really appreciate the fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man."

Mrs. Josephine Kyles, representing the Washington Federation of Churches, described the work of her organization.

In session here since Wednesday, the eight bishops comprising the board will meet through today. They are Bishops P. A. Wallace, Brooklyn, N. Y.; B. G. Shaw, Birmingham, Ala.; W. J. Walls and J. W. Martin, Chicago; C. C. Alleyne, Philadelphia; W. W. Matthews, Washington; E. L. Madison, Pittsburgh, and W. C. Brown, Los Angeles.

East Has Enough Oil for Homes, Ickes Declares

Interior Secretary Ickes said yesterday that the East has enough fuel oil to get through the present cold spell and meet demands for home heating, but warned that the supply cannot be kept at the existing level unless consumers stay within their ration allotment.

"Any undue optimism about the fuel oil stocks which results in unnecessary demands for supplemental rations," Ickes said, "will throw the supply program out of kilter immediately." He declared a serious shortage will develop if this happens.

Ickes, who is also petroleum administrator for war, said that some temporary local shortages may develop in the East because of unfavorable transportation factors—wearing out of tank trucks, shortage of tires and congestion on the railroads.

Washington experienced such a shortage last week.

tee discussion was an exchange between Representatives Celler (Democrat), New York, and Russell (Democrat), Texas, occasioned when Celler said the War Manpower Commission found drinking caused only a small amount of absenteeism. Russell retorted that the WMC was "very prejudiced" against any legislation to halt the liquor traffic.

Earlier, Representative Walter (Democrat), Pennsylvania, a committee member, expressed the hope servicemen would be given a hearing. He was in the last war, he said, and was "one of those who had prohibition put over on us."

man aircraft plants at Oschersleben, Brunswick and Halberstadt.

The Flugzeugwerke AMG plant at Oschersleben, 90 miles southwest of Berlin, believed to be the most important producer of Focke-Wulf 190s, was well covered by a heavy concentration of high explosives and incendiaries loosed by the Americans who tore through swarms of rocket-firing German fighters.

Nine Direct Hits

Its main machine shop received at least nine direct hits and the whole area was shown in the photographs to have caught fire. From one to three bomb bursts were noted in various assembly shops.

The other plants which suffered heavily were the Junkers factory at Halberstadt and the Messerschmitt-110 plant at Brunswick.

Other targets just disclosed as having been attacked were the railway component manufacturing center at Bielefeld, 55 miles northwest of Dortmund and 200 miles west of Berlin, and armament installations at Meppen, on the Dortmund-Ems Canal, 50 miles south of Emden.

Costliest American Raid

The loss of 60 bombers and 5 fighters in what was described as the greatest aerial conflict in the war officially established Tuesday's onslaught as the costliest American raid.

The previous record was 60 bombers and 2 fighters in the attack on Schweinfurt, October 14.

"We have plenty of replacements—we can take a whole lot more in war losses than we suffered Tuesday," an Eighth Air Force spokesman said.

New planes and crews have been arriving in England daily in such a stream that in some instances it has caused temporary housing and feeding problems.

Total Still Incomplete

The recapitulation statement listed 125 enemy fighters destroyed by the bombers and 27 by American fighters. That total of 152 still is incomplete, and the statement said it did not include any Nazi planes which "undoubtedly were shot down" by crewmen of the missing 60 bombers which "fought to the last in the thickest of battles."

Many other enemy planes are recorded as "probable kills" or as damaged.

The attitude here is that the Germans took a record toll of 65 American aircraft manned by 605 highly trained men, but failed in their basic mission—to prevent the systematic destruction of vital war industries geared so desperately against the coming day of invasion.

New Mustang Participated

Another official disclosure revealed that the newest and longest range single-engine fighter plane in the world, the American P-51B Mustang, accompanied the bombers into Germany. Pilots of these swift planes accounted for at least 14 of the 152 destroyed German fighters.

The Mustang is an improved version of the P-51. It can carry extra gas tanks for long-range work, or a 500-pound bomb under each wing. The cannon in the nose has been sacrificed for extra distance, and its armament consists of four 50-caliber guns in the wings.

During the day an RAF Typhoon squadron, technically "off duty," shot down eight German planes over northern France at a cost of one plane. Though not scheduled to fly the squadron volunteered to make the sweep when the weather improved during the afternoon.

London had a brief alert tonight, the first sounded in eight days, and a heavy barrage greeted the raiders coming in over the Thames Estuary on the east coast. One bomb fell in a coastal area, but no damage was reported. One German plane was shot down into the sea by antiaircraft gunners.

12 Millions to Get 'In-Plant' Meals

Program Found Impracticable in Small Factories

By Christine Sadler

Vigorous action to expand in-plant feeding facilities to an additional 5,500,000 warworkers during 1944, almost doubling the present program, was promised yesterday by seven Government agencies as a follow-up to recent instructions from President Roosevelt.

The program is designed to insure at least one hot midshift meal for the Nation's 12 million workers in large war plants by providing cafeteria, canteen, or mobile food cart service for all of them, the Office of War Information said in a report which found in-plant feeding not needed or impracticable for eight million others working in small plants with adequate restaurants in the vicinity.

Cooperating Agencies

Agencies cooperating in the program will be the War and Navy Departments, which will see that such facilities are available in their own plants and those working on Army and Navy contracts; the War Production Board, which will survey the plants to see what materials are needed and make them available; the Maritime Commission, which has surveyed merchant shipyards and already recommended installation of suitable eating facilities where needed; the War Manpower Commission, which will measure the adequacy of facilities installed and clear workers needed for the projects; the Office of Price Administration, which will make ration allotments available and see that prices are kept in line, and the Civilian Food Requirements Branch of the Food Distribution Administration, which will coordinate work of other agencies and direct the feeding program.

Contract Absorbs Cost

Cooperation between management and labor is asked to facilitate a meeting of the goals, but responsibility for establishing the facilities "has been placed squarely on the employer, as being a factor in production." Cost of installing the facilities will be absorbed automatically in plants operating on a cost-plus-fixed-fee contract, OWI pointed out, and will be more than balanced in other plants by improved output.

The hot midshift meal that is the minimum goal will be planned to provide at least a third of the day's requirements for adequate nourishment for active workers without disturbing individual ration allowances or cutting into the family's allotment to provide a packed lunch.

Although the WPB and other agencies have repeatedly stressed the advantage to production in workers having adequate in-plant feeding facilities and although some plants have inaugurated notable feeding programs on their own, the concerted Government action did not come until the President wrote War Director Donald Nelson ordering a complete nutritional program as necessary to the war effort.

Markups Fixed

OPA Order May Reduce Fish Price

Sharp reductions in retail prices of fresh fish should result, in most markets, from dollar and cents mark-ups to go into effect January 27, the Office of Price Administration said yesterday.

Admitting that the fish pricing system—above wholesale—has been unenforceable because stores have been permitted to add their "traditional" mark-ups, OPA said the new prices would be at average 1942 levels.

Under the new program all stores of the same class will have the same legal prices and, with the exception of transportation cost variations, prices will be the same throughout the Nation.

Forty-five species of fish, shrimp, and scallops were ordered brought under control. The new system will be easily enforceable, OPA said, where under the present system retail prices have kept "advancing in an inflationary manner even after imposition of fisherman and wholesale controls."

Real Thief Saves Suspect In $203 Theft

A letter containing $316 from a "conscience-stricken" anonymous person attempting to exonerate a Railway Express Co. employe of a charge of embezzlement was presented to a District Court jury which later returned with a verdict of not guilty.

The verdict was in favor of John L. Boyer, 30, of 1614 S st. se., who was charged with taking $203 of his day's receipts of $316. He contended he turned in the money and had a receipt to show for it. This, the prosecution claimed was a forgery and handwriting experts were unable to verify its authenticity.

Just prior to the trial, a letter containing the signature, "A. E. Employ," was sent to the court. It said, "I don't want to see an innocent person convicted for something he didn't do. I want to clear the driver and my own conscience."

The letter related the sender had taken the money after it was turned in to the company.

The jury deliberated four hours before returning the verdict. Boyer was represented by Attorney A. F. Goshorh.

Bankers Back Bad-Check Bill At Hearing

A bill designed to relieve Washington banks of losses through fraudulently cashed checks got a blanket indorsement yesterday at a hearing before a House District Subcommittee. The measure hangs losses on the party making fraud possible.

John A. Reilly, representing the District Bankers Association, declared the legislation would facilitate cashing of Government checks "and induce Government departments to keep on the alert for fraudulent check operations, and not be lulled into a feeling of security that they can rely on the guarantee of indorsements by banks."

He pointed out three Washington banks were victimized to the extent of $100,000 a few years ago by the activities of a Government official who made out payroll vouchers for fictitious employes of an imaginary CCC camp and cashed checks issued by the War Department on the vouchers.

W. C. Koontz, president of the Anacostia Bank, cited a $60,000 loss he said his institution suffered when it cashed checks issued to six fictitious United States employes.

Others who favored the bill were Joseph C. McGarraghy, chairman of the law and legislative committee of the Washington Board of Trade, and C. Clifton James, counsel for the District Building and Loan Association.

trial workers into their bailiwicks as potential voters.

They have been studying for some time the potential influence of the CIO Political Action Committee. Many fear that political activities which would keep them in office were rural voters to remain a majority would defeat them if the unionized industrial workers are numerous enough to obtain control.

There was no immediate statement from the CIO on the charges. Earlier, however, in interpreting the Connally-Smith Act, CIO officials have maintained that it is not applicable to primary campaigns for Federal office.

The law provides that an officer of any labor organization who violates the section of the Connally-Smith Act in question "shall be fined not more than $1000 or imprisoned not more than one year or both."

Suspect Pleads Not Guilty In Sedition Plot

Garland Alderman of Detroit, one of 30 indicted on charges of plotting to undermine the morale of the armed forces and set up a Nazi-type government here, pleaded not guilty when arraigned yesterday before Justice Edward C. Eicher of District Court.

Alderman was said by the Government to be an officer of the National Workers League, which published the vitriolic Nationalist News Letter. He was said to be an associate of E. J. Parker Sage, also of Detroit, who pleaded innocent last week.

Moves are being made to bring the case to early trial, by April at the maximum. Meanwhile the inquiry by the special grand jury assigned to probe sedition cases continued under the direction of O. John Rogge, special assistant to the Attorney General.

A number of the defendants are to be arraigned today.

The indictments were, in part, the result of research by Dillard Stokes, a Washington Post reporter now in the Army, into the field of sedition.

Seized Liquor Vanished Through 'Opening in Wall'

Sioux City, Iowa, Jan. 13 (AP).—A grand jury which investigated the disappearance of an estimated 95 quarts of confiscated liquor reported last night that it disappeared through "an opening in the wall" of the courthouse vault.

The report said the grand jury "finds no evidence upon which to establish a criminal charge in this case against any persons or persons."

The liquor went through "an opening in the wall up toward the ceiling—this opening leads into an empty room which is accessible to anyone," the jury added. The opening was immediately bricked up. The liquor was seized in raids.

28 Liquor Retailers Testify At Forman Bookkeeper's Trial

Twenty-five liquor retailers testified yesterday in the trial of Albert M. Steinberg, charged with embezzling $9300 from th firm of Forman Inc., as the Government sought to prove the bookkeeper had changed company records.

All the witnesses said that on various occasions they had paid between $30 and $800 to drivers for deliveries. The Government has introduced evidence indicating Steinberg marked these receipts "charge account" when they should have gone into the cash column.

Justice Matthew F. McGuire adjourned court until Monday when 15 other retailers are to appear, and Lieut. Comdr. John Fitzpatrick, Forman attorney, will testify to a conversation with Steinberg, who is said to have admitted the embezzlement.

The Government also will call six truck drivers for the firm in an attempt to trace funds into Steinberg's hands. The prosecutors are Assistant United States Attorneys Bernard Margolius and John L. Ingoldsby.

$143,717 Paid For 2584 Tax Certificates

A total of $143,717 was realized in sale to private buyers of 2584 certificates on tax delinquent properties during the annual District sale Tuesday and Wednesday, Tax Collector Guy Pearson announced yesterday.

About 3000 tax certificates were bought in by the District for lack of other buyers, he said.

During the first day, 1112 properties went to private buyers, and returns totaled $104,295, Pearson said. He pointed out that most properties sold Tuesday were downtown lots with improvements on them. The second day's sales totaled 1472, but returns were only $39,421. Pearson said most lots sold Wednesday were unimproved.

Reported sale yesterday of certificates on land comprising the Marjorie Webster School of Expression and Physical Education was in error. Pearson said yesterday taxes were paid on these properties and certificates were not offered for sale on them. A certificate on a parcel of land listed in the name cf Shapiro, Inc., was sold for $8072.11, according to Pearson. The surveyor's office says the parcel is located at 14th st. and Luzon ave. nw. and has a five-story brick apartment on it.

Old Dominion Rail Hearing Set Jan. 27

Upon presentation of a letter from the War Department which stated that Federal operation of the railroads "does not affect" hearings which are held to extend railroad service, the Virginia State Corporation Commission has called a hearing for January 27 at the Richmond in the case of extension of service of the Washington Old Dominion Railroad.

CAN'T KEEP GRANDMA IN HER CHAIR

She's as Lively as a Youngster—Now her Backache is better

Many sufferers relieve nagging backache quickly, once they discover that the real cause of their trouble may be tired kidneys.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking the excess acids and waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.

When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills

Order Filed Against AP In Trust Case

New York, Jan. 13 (AP).—Judgment was filed in Federal Court today restraining the Associated Press perpetually from observing bylaws under which members might consider the competitive ability of an applicant for membership but stipulating that the Associated Press might resist admission on other grounds.

The order was stayed for 60 days to permit either the news gathering cooperative or the Government to appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States. In the event of an appeal, the stay would remain in effect pending a decision.

Frank B. Noyes, honorary president of the Associated Press, president of the Washington Star and a director of Associated Press for 50 years, said in a statement that he took it "for granted that the decision will be appealed."

"Victory for Government"

John Henry Lewin, special assistant to the Attorney General and one of counsel in the case, said in Washington that the "decree constitutes a significant victory for the Government."

The judgment, signed by Circuit Judges Learned Hand, Augustus N. Hand and Thomas W. Swan, represented their formal order in the Government's civil antitrust suit against the AP.

The section declaring illegal bylaws under which the AP might "take into consideration the effect of admission upon the ability of (an) applicant to compete" with AP members in the same territory or field (morning, evening or Sunday) including the proviso:

"Nothing herein shall prevent the adoption by the Associated Press of new or amended bylaws which will restrict admission, provided that members in the same city and in the same 'field' . . . as an applicant publishing a newspaper in the United States of America or its territories, shall not have power to impose, or dispense with, any conditions upon his admission and that the bylaws shall affirmatively declare that the effect of admission upon the ability of such applicant to compete with members in the same city and 'field' shall not be taken into consideration in passing upon his application."

The judgment contained three other restraints, which the court said could be modified or terminated in the event the AP amended its by-laws respecting admission.

Today this man challenges 22,000,000 Americans

THIS MAN IS CHARLES A. BEARD, the dean of American historians.

He has written a book called The Republic. It explains and interprets the U. S. Constitution, that amazing document which for more than a century and a half has guided the destiny of America.

The editors of LIFE believe that this work is vital, stimulating and, above all, timely... that it will strengthen faith in America. They are going to print the book in condensed form so that the 22,000,000 Americans who read LIFE each week can have a renewed incentive to think about and discuss their form of government.

The Republic is warm and human in style. It is written as a series of informal discussions, led by Mr. Beard, that take place among friends and neighbors gathered before his fireplace.

But this condensed version of The Republic is not something you can breeze through. It poses many questions that are complex and profound. It is offered to you by LIFE as a challenge . . . a challenge to consider the most serious problems that Americans face today in governing themselves.

In fact, many LIFE readers may want to form their own fireside groups to discuss, in the manner of the people in Mr. Beard's book, the major questions he raises and interprets.

Here are a few of those questions:

- Did the framers of the Constitution mean ALL the people when they wrote "We the People of the United States"?
- Why is the word "woman" never used in the Constitution?
- Under the Constitution, should Congress have as much say on U. S. Foreign Policy as the President?
- How far may the Federal Government go, under our Constitution, in promoting the general welfare?
- Aside from helping the politicians who run them, what purpose do political parties serve?

Starting with its current issue, LIFE is reprinting a section of Mr. Beard's book every week for a number of weeks. The first part is called "We, the People."

PLEASE NOTE: Because of wartime paper restrictions, LIFE can't print enough copies to meet the huge demand. The purpose of this advertisement, therefore, is not to increase LIFE's newsstand sales, but to suggest to readers of this paper that they borrow copies of LIFE to read these sections from Mr. Beard's book.

No More Blackouts

The joint announcement by the War Department and the Office of Civilian Defense that hereafter there will be no more blackouts or air-raid drills involving the general public, except on Sundays and then not oftener than once in three months, strikes us as a somewhat belated step in the direction of common sense. It has been obvious for some time that from a military standpoint, whatever value there may have been in these drills has been more than offset by the disturbance to community life and the consequent loss in production. Some of those with authority to order such drills had exercised a good deal of ingenuity in timing them so as to coincide with the point of maximum nuisance—for example, at a time when the war industrial plants were changing shifts.

We hope that with the cessation of the blackouts will come a cessation of the periodic announcements by civil and military authorities that Axis air raids against the United States are not only probable but imminent. The plausibility of such alarms is in inverse ratio to the frequency with which they turn out to be false alarms. So many have cried wolf so long and so often that if a genuine raid should now occur, it is doubtful whether the population of any city would take the alarm seriously before the actual explosion of the bombs. There was an alert in Boston on Christmas Eve on the assumption that Hitler intended to attack the Atlantic Coast. The most recent alarm was one by Representative Cannon of Missouri, sounded as recently as January 3 and based on information supplied by "a highly placed official of the United States" who was "certainly in a position to know what he was talking about." This anonymous informant told Mr. Cannon that Hitler is holding a special squadron of bombers in reserve for the purpose of punishing some American city.

Air Losses

In view of the fact that more than 700 Flying Fortresses and Liberators took part in Tuesday's great raids on German fighter plane assembling plants at Oschersleben, Halberstadt, Feberstadt and Brunswick, the loss that day of 59 bombers and five fighters, was, while severe, not excessive. Against this loss must be set the still undisclosed but possibly great damage done to the targets plus the shooting down of more than 100 German fighter planes. Furthermore, Tuesday's losses must be fitted into the general framework of the continuous aerial assault which the RAF and the Eighth Air Force are carrying out against the enemy. Some days the losses are light to the point of being nonexistent. At the time of the Schweinfurt raid, when 60 four-engined bombers were lost, and again last Tuesday, they were relatively high. The significant fact is that the over-all percentage of losses suffered by Allied air power in western Europe has been kept reasonably low. Only occasionally are the Germans in a position to inflict real blows and then only by concentrating a large part of the Luftwaffe's fighter strength in one area. This, apparently, is what happened Tuesday, and the Germans took advantage of the situation by broadcasting fantastic claims of the punishment they had meted out—124 heavy bombers and 12 fighters. But these figures, it is encouraging to note, were a gross exaggeration of the truth.

Russian Progress

With the capture by Gen. Nikolai F. Vatutin's First Ukrainian Army of Sarny and Dumbrovitsa on the north-south railroad that links Rovno and Minsk, the shortest route between the German forces to the north and those to the south of the Pripet Marshes has now been severed. The junction point between these armies is now Brest-Litovsk, 135 miles to the east of the Rovno-Minsk railroad.

This development brings out the vital fact that in the present struggle on the Eastern Front the retreat of the Germans has thus far resulted in no shortening of their lines. Paradoxically their lines today are longer than they were a fortnight ago, since, instead of a straight line, they are now strung, in Poland at least, along two sides of a triangle. And the same is true in the Ukraine. Whereas the distance as the crow flies between the left and right tips of Gen. von Mannstein's army is only around 250 miles, the Germans are actually defending a front of well over 600 miles in the bend of the Dnieper. This fact makes conservation of manpower difficult and has prevented the Germans from reinforcing western Europe against the anticipated Allied invasion.

In the meantime it is evident that as between the Polish salient and the Ukrainian sector the Germans are determined to hold on to the latter as long as possible, even at the expense of the former. That is why the Russians are encountering far more resistance in their drive on Zhmerinka and the Odessa-Lwow trunk line—the principal German escape route from the Ukraine—than they have in eastern Poland. But there is now a strong possibility that the Germans have outstayed their leave in the Ukraine, for once the Odessa-Lwow line is cut, as it will be sooner or later, a considerable German force will be trapped.

Budget Message

One of the outstanding features of the President's budget statement is its incomplete and provisional character. Detailed recommendations for most of the new war appropriations have yet to be made. Moreover, the sums already appropriated or to be appropriated may never be fully spent. Certainly they will not be, if the European war should end well in advance of June 30, 1945. However, as the President explains, congressional approval of new appropriations and contract authorizations will be necessary to permit flexibility in planning and execution by military leaders and procurement agencies.

The President rightly emphasizes the difference between the anticipated cost of the war program measured by appropriations, contract authorizations and Government corporation commitments, and the cost measured by the amounts actually spent. The cost on the former basis amounted to 344 billion dollars for the period from June 1940 through December 1943, whereas expenditures for the same period totaled only 153 billion dollars. Since expenditures lag far behind amounts appropriated, the new war appropriations for the fiscal year 1945, tentatively estimated by the President at 60 billion dollars (plus 10 billion dollars for new contract authorizations), bear no relation to the anticipated volume of expenditures.

The President, in addition to keeping the budget fluid, has injected a great deal of irrelevant material into his message. Instead of concentrating attention upon the estimated costs of Government operations in the coming fiscal year and proposals for meeting those costs, he has touched upon a variety of issues that would have fitted much more appropriately into his annual message or into a political address to the electorate. Nevertheless we heartily indorse the assertion that it is imperative to develop a unified program to deal with the interrelated problems of contract termination, surplus property disposal, and industrial reconversion from war to peacetime production. It is also encouraging to be told that work along that line is being expedited by the Office of War Mobilization. However, discussion of long-range problems of this kind does not belong in a budget message, since they cover a range of interests going far beyond the realm of fiscal policy.

Recommended expansion of the permanent program of social security, planning for postwar public works, mustering out pay, reemployment of demobilized workers and members of the armed forces are also among the topics reviewed in the budget message. Important though these issues are, they are not related to the immediate budget program, since spending projects have yet to be developed, in line with the President's nebulous suggestions. Of course, vagueness concerning the cost of postwar rehabilitation and adjustment plans is inevitable. But the President might have given Congress—and the public—some much-needed information about the amounts desired for food subsidy purposes. Instead, he merely says that congressional action on the Commodity Credit Corporation bill is essential if the WFA's program of support prices is to be carried out. That schedule, he adds, must be implemented by loans and by purchase and sales programs. No hint is given as to the probable cost of such programs. Furthermore, the President states that requested appropriations for the Department of Agriculture—much reduced—make no provision for potential CCC losses.

Expenditures for veteran pensions and benefits are expected to increase rapidly in the fiscal year 1945, rising from 865 million dollars to 1,252 million. Another item of expense that is rapidly rising and, like veterans' pensions, is destined to be a legacy of war is interest on the public debt, estimated at 3.75 billion dollars in the coming fiscal year. By the end of the current fiscal year the public debt will approximate 200 billion dollars, and it may reach 258 billion dollars a year later—clear evidence of the inadequacy of existing tax legislation. Estimates of receipts and expenditures, on the basis of existing taxes, indicate that the budget deficit for 1945 will amount to 59 billion dollars—just 900 million dollars above the revised estimate for the current fiscal year. With total expenditures close to 100 billion dollars in 1944 and in 1945, we shall be covering about 40 per cent of outlays from taxes, leaving 60 per cent to be borrowed.

These huge deficits reenforce the President's request for additional taxes. Unfortunately, the President has no specific new tax recommendations to make, being content to urge the voting of wartime taxes at least equal to the amount requested last October by the Treasury. In view of the hostile attitude of Congress to the Treasury program, the need for a new tax approach seems obvious. Evidently the President, who "hesitated" for three whole years about the need for national service, is still hesitating over a general sales tax, though as far back as January 5, 1942, he envisaged such a levy as a temporary wartime necessity. The President's "take it or leave it" attitude is not calculated to persuade Congress to approve the "truly stiff fiscal program" for which he has called.

Valedictory

Lie down, ye prisoners of starvation! Stand aside, ye wretched of the earth! Can't you hear all the clanking? Don't get in the way of Comrade Browder and Comrade Foster and the other stalwarts while they resume the fetters of tradition and whoop it up for capitalistic free enterprise and national unity! Haven't you heard that the class war is over, that an armistice eminently satisfactory to both sides has been negotiated and signed? Goodby, the Revolution; farewell, agitation! From now on the watchwords are 100 per cent Americanism and "Down with the Reds!"

At a vast service held the other evening in Madison Square Garden to commemorate the death of St. Lenin, Mr. Earl Browder formally announced the liquidation of Communism and the Communist Party in the United States. Henceforth, the comrades will cease to be revolutionaries or even socialists. At any rate, they will not "raise the issue of socialism in such a form and manner as to endanger or weaken the national unity." Henceforth, the comrades will not play into the hands of the reactionaries by offering any opposition to the capitalist system. Henceforth, the comrades will see eye to eye with the National Association of Manufacturers on the question of postwar export markets. And henceforth the comrades will vote as good Republicans or good Democrats, since "'the two-party system' is an old tradition which dominates American minds." Accordingly, a convention has been called for next May at which the word "party" will be formally purged from the vocabularies of the faithful. The movement (as of 4:12 p. m., Tuesday, it was still permissible to refer to a "movement") will adopt "a name more exactly representing its role as part of a larger unity in the Nation, not seeking any partisan advancement—a name, for example, like American Communist Political Association."

We haven't the slightest doubt that in announcing this latest hangman's knot in the party line, Mr. Browder is faithfully obeying what he considers the wishes of the Kremlin. But we doubt that Mr. Browder has ever possessed the sort of clairvoyance or extrasensory perception necessary in such a job as his. The occasions on which Mr. Browder and the editors of the Daily Worker have misread the mind of Moscow have been so frequent as to be notorious. But the "American Communist Political Association!" We suspect that what is really wanted is something much less high brow and much more genuinely American. Our suggestion is that the comrades forget about the "political association" and reorganize themselves into the Benevolent, Chivalric and Fraternal order of the Mystic Marx, with appropriate rituals, costumes. grips, passwords, watch charms, death benefits, annual outings, ladies' auxiliaries, and junior fife and drum corps. After all, if Comrade Browder expects the customers to keep on paying dues, he will have to give them something for their money. And since it can't be a revolution, it ought at least to be an opportunity to dress up.

Cause For Divorce

We do not know whether there is any truth in the report that Postmaster General Frank C. Walker is about to resign as chairman of the Democratic National Committee. But we believe that such a decision on his part would clearly be in the public interest. Certainly it would work to the advantage of the Government as a whole and quite possibly also to that of the Democratic Party.

Election campaigns are a national necessity in the United States regardless of war, depression or other emergency. Only by holding elections at the intervals prescribed by the Constitution can our system of government be kept functioning. When an election comes in the midst of a great conflict requiring the wholehearted devotion of all citizens, however, politics ought to be kept as far away from the conduct of the war as is possible. Politicians render disservice to their country when they drag any aspect of the war into their bids for votes. At the same time there is need for constant discussion of issues growing out of the war in a nonpartisan spirit. It will undoubtedly help to keep this line of distinction clear if the campaign of the party in power this year is conducted from outside the President's Cabinet. At best it is difficult to separate what is national and nonpartisan from what is political in the narrow sense of the word. But separation of active party office from Cabinet posts will certainly aid the public, the campaigners and public officials in keeping their eyes on the main objective.

FLIGHT

Far off, but nearer than we know, rivers rise steeply underground, intoning through long caverns as they run a lonely sound.

Darkness is sown in us like a seed.
It will flower: death and pity will grow in the wet streets of this dark city.

And the wild footsteps ringing nightly on the empty stair, rousing from sleep the ghostly watchers
who await us there,

down the grim corridors clattering shall wake their sons and their children after them forever and the childless ones.

Yellow the light from my fainting candle rocks on your brow;
should it fail, there would be no light anywhere in the whole world now.

Blaisdell Letter

Soldier Ballots

ABOUT SOLDIER-VOTING, light is emerging. Everybody started out with, and still holds, the objective—that every soldier be given opportunity to vote. But when attempt was made to write a workable method into law, difficulties were encountered.

In the discussion of ways to overcome the difficulties, useful contributions have come from several sources. One source is a man whose experience and information give him authority—the executive director of the Better Government Association of Chicago, Mr. Fred W. Blaisdell. Mr. Blaisdell put his ideas into a letter to Congressman Busby of Illinois. From the letter I quote:

"As a practical matter, the best possible solution to the difficult problem of service men's voting is to have local election boards handle the vote . . ."

This method is attended by difficulty—as is every other method. Accepting this method tentatively, let us see how it would work out, the steps to be taken:

(a) Let every election board in every precinct in the country, make up a list of soldiers from the precinct. This is simple to do. Election boards already have lists of voters in their precincts. Brief consultation with the local draft boards would supply the names of voters who are in the army.

(b) Let every election board send to every soldier a blank ballot—the same ballot used in ordinary voting.

(c) Let the soldier fill out his ballot, just as any other voter does, and mail it back to the election board in his precinct.

SOLDIER-VOTING, by this method or any other, is a burden on mailing facilities, borne by the Army and Navy. But this burden must be undertaken—if we are to have soldier-voting at all. By any method—Federal, State or what not—some 10 million ballots must be sent to soldiers and returned.

The burden is not insuperable. We saw last fall Christmas presents sent to soldiers at the front, probably an average of 2 or 3 packages to each soldier. This was a greater burden on mailing facilities than soldier-voting would be. At all times soldiers receive many letters—relatives and friends are constantly urged to send them. Carrying a ballot to a soldier is not a greater burden on the Army than carrying an ordinary letter. To ease the burden, ballots can be printed in such a way that they can be photographed and sent by V-mail, as many letters are.

In order to carry out this method, some States must do certain things. Several States already have absentee voting laws in such form that soldiers can vote—such States do not need to do anything. But States which do not have absentee voting laws must enact them. And some of the States which do have absentee voting laws must adapt them to soldier-voting. The principal change needed is in the matter of time permitted. The time adequate for a soldier abroad to receive his ballot and return it is estimated at 60 days. Also as a matter of course States must waive the ordinary requirements for personal registration, and for length of residence in the voting district, and for payment of poll taxes where such taxes exist.

THESE CHANGES are already being made by the States that need to make them. Some States are able to make the changes in regular sessions of their Legislatures now being held. In two States, special sessions of the Legislatures have already been called, sat, made the necessary changes and adjourned. Six States have called special sessions of the Legislature for an early date. In some States the changes can be made without a session of the Legislature, by executive action of State officials.

It is indispensable that every State take whatever step is necessary—if the method of soldier-voting here outlined is to be adopted and carried out.

The advantage of this method is that it puts the soldier on exactly the same footing as every other voter. The soldier gets the opportunity to vote for every office, from President down to sheriff. The voter gets exactly the same ballot that every other voter gets.

This latter—giving the soldier the same ballot that other voters get and giving him opportunity to vote for all offices—distinguishes the method here described, the method by State action, from proposed methods by Federal action. The proposals for Federal action would give the soldier a special form of ballot—providing for voting for Federal officials only, not for State ones.

D. C. Restaurants

I certainly wish to compliment The Post for its exposure of restaurant conditions in Washington. Action in that field has been long overdue.

When I first came to Washington in 1935 I found sanitary conditions in the kitchens and washrooms of Washington restaurants appalling. I have eaten in restaurants for the past 20 years throughout the Middle West, and have never found such conditions as existed and still exist here.

Soldier Vote

By Paul Schubert

Vexed Question

SHOULD the soldier vote?

On the face of it, it sounds ridiculous to disenfranchise a man by the simple process of drafting him into the Army. Those who view democracy with critical cynicism can point immediately to any number of possible abuses, beginning with the local draft board—how easy, in theory, to control elections by drafting members of the opposition.

If you put it up to the soldier himself he will probably say, "Sure, we ought to vote." It is human nature to want to hold on to all rights and privileges. Beyond that, men in the service have an instinctive tendency to believe that the home population, consisting of sissies, women, old crocks and organized labor, is doing its best to run the country into the ground while the able-bodied males are away. The classic argument is prohibition, which was theoretically "put over on" the country during the last war "while the men were away."

IF THE act of voting were all there was to it, there would be no question about the answer to the problem.

Unfortunately, the act of voting is merely the climax of a long preliminary period, sometimes lasting several months, during which a man makes up his mind how he is going to vote. This period of electioneering, which begins even before candidates are nominated, is the very heart of the democratic system. It is the safety valve, during which the opposition has a chance to preach change. It is sometimes said that we have too much electioneering—but trouble, when it comes, is invariably more the result of lack of electioneering, lack of the education resulting from full pre-election debate, than from too much of the same.

How is the soldier to be exposed to campaigning?

He will, of course, automatically absorb some of the national campaigning for the Presidency during 1944—he is sure to have a pretty fixed idea as to which candidate he will want to see in the White House.

BUT SUPPOSE military matters become a campaign issue? Suppose the Republicans are critical of Army administration? Are they to have the privilege of mailing campaign literature to the troops?

Graver still is the problem of the local election, the State election—how are men far from home to judge the qualifications of a long list of candidates? How are they to know the issues involved in a matter such as the recent Aurelio candidacy in New York State?

I remember, during the early twenties, receiving a New York State ballot while serving in the Navy on the Pacific Coast. I had never before so much as heard the name of a single one of the men for whom I was entitled, as an absentee voter, to signify my choice.

Under such circumstances the power of the vote is uncontrolled and dangerous. If men are to have the vote they need pre-election information—and there's the rub of this vexed matter.

Press In Algiers

Measures recently taken by the French Committee of National Liberation have given rise to reports that the committee was restricting freedom of the press in order to protect its position. No such conclusion can be reached from an examination of the facts.

Two communications from the commissariat of information establish that, in execution of a decision taken by the Committee of Liberation on November 30, 1943, upon recommendation of the Purge Commission, the commissioner for justice applied to the qualified special term judges for an order of sequestration (which was granted) affecting all North African newspapers and periodicals published before November 8, 1942.

This procedure is perfectly normal. Under French law, a "demande en refere" (an ex-parte application made to a judge of the court) is presented whenever prompt provisional remedy, such as an attachment, a receivership, or a sequestration is desired. A similar procedure exists in New York and other States in like cases. In this particular instance, the function of the sequestration order is to place at the disposal of the court the files of the newspapers and periodicals under investigation. It constitutes no judgment on the merits of the question to be subsequently considered by the court.

The texts of the communications, which I have read, make clear that the object of the sequestration order is to enable the Purge Commission to gain access to documents which might serve to establish the identity and responsibility of the persons involved in the collaborationist attitude of a particular newspaper or periodical. It is stated further that the newspapers affected by the order will continue to be published and to express their opinions as in the past. That this promise has not remained a dead letter is indicated by the fact that during the past weeks the Echo d'Alger and other North African newspapers sequestered have freely criticized the order in their editorial columns.

Among the papers not sequestered, France, a French daily published in London which has always observed a severely critical attitude towards General de Gaulle, the French National Committee and the present Committee of Liberation, expresses complete agreement with the order of sequestration in an editorial which appeared in its December 21, 1943, number. It is significant also that French newspapermen, through their professional organizations, the Syndicat national des journalistes and the Syndicat des journalistes confederes, have expressed their satisfaction with the measures taken by the Committee of Liberation for the investigation of the North African press and with the assurances it has given that freedom of expression will continue to be respected.

To view the order of sequestration in its proper perspective, we must remember that it represents only one of the measures being carried out under the inspiration of the delegates of the French underground to the consultative assembly for the elimination from the army, the navy, the civil service, the press, business and finance of those elements whom prolonged association with Vichy has discredited in the eyes of their countrymen.

Battle Zone Rations

I am inclosing part of a letter which I received from a friend stationed in the South Pacific which may help convince housewives that the things they are going without or are getting in limited quantities really are going to our fighting men in the battle zones. I hope that the next time I can't get something I want I'll remember all the other things I have compared to the few that our fighting men have.

"Of course we get butter, meat and potatoes. Although some is canned, most is fresh and our food is the best, believe me. There are some gripers, yes, but they are the type who would grumble if they got chicken and ice cream every day. We also get vegetables every day, but, of course, they have to be canned because fresh vegetables won't travel and keep. We do have a nice ice box where cold tea and fruit juices are prepared. I love both and we have plenty. Don't believe any rumors to the contrary, because I'm here and I see and eat every day. Three times a day, too, when I'm not too busy."

Letting Them Down

I am just another who has just read of a walkout over there on the mainland and I want to state that I am utterly disgusted. I want to say that thousands of soldiers feel the same way about the strike situation. May I ask the American people how they expect to win the war quickly when they organize strikes which inevitably slow up the production of war materials, the means through which this war can be won.

I understand that strikers are asking for more money and more privileges while on the job. I ask these people in the United States to stop and compare their present living conditions to those of us boys in the service and to the conditions of their allied neighbors. The single conclusion is that the American people are leading the richest lives of all peoples today, yet it is known that there are strikers among them who are helping to prolong the war, which means prolonged disaster for the entire world. Isn't leading the most luxurious lives of all peoples today enough? Can't you get along without striking for more?

This strike situation is a foremost thought in my mind (as it is in the minds of many soldiers here), for I feel as though we are being let down by you people on the home front. We soldiers, the sailors and marines aren't letting you down! Need you let us down?

Delays In Congress

I think Congress, as well as other Post readers, will be interested in one serviceman's viewpoint of present trends in Congress. He has been out there pitching for 20 months—please remember, they glean their information from the press and radio—not propagandists. He writes:

"We had as good a Christmas as anyone could ask for, under the circumstances — Christmas carol services on the main deck aft, and a whopping good dinner. Our only prayer out here is to get this thing over with—the sooner the better, and get back to our loved ones. Believe me that we are doing the best we can with what we have. The planning and leadership is excellent, and there is absolutely no use for (censored) congressional investigations like the one they want on the Tarawa episode. I wasn't there, but I'd wager anything that as far as planning and leadership were concerned, there was nothing left to be desired. We have been lucky so far. There will be more Tarawas—many of them—before this is over. Congress merely delays the war with all their hell-raising. Please excuse me for expressing my heartfelt sympathies so strongly, but I know what I'm talking about, amphibious warfare is tough."

This 22-year-old reserve officer happens to be my son, but it could be any mother's son out there. They know what the Japs are doing, but they also know what Congress is doing.

Schacht To The Rescue

By Paul Winkler

Dangerous Threat

AN UNCONFIRMED report from Switzerland that Dr. Schacht has been called to succeed Foreign Minister Joachim Ribbentrop is almost certainly another trial balloon launched by the Germans. Whether or not Dr. Schacht actually does succeed to this office in the near future is of minor importance. What is significant is that such stories concerning Schacht are put out regularly, for that means that he is being kept in reserve by German leaders as the man who may possibly negotiate with the Allies a peace more acceptable to the Reich than Hitler could ever obtain.

Unfortunately, there are still many persons in influential positions in America who do not realize that Schacht was not simply a German who consented to cooperate with the Nazis after they reached power, not simply even a tool of the Nazis, but actually one of those who were instrumental in putting them into power and of devising and applying their economic system. This system, designed to give Germany economic domination of the world, constitutes a much more dangerous threat to other countries than the political theories of Nazism.

One of the reasons why the Nazis feel that Schacht would be a good person to approach the Allies is his American background. Paradoxically, the father of this cofounder of totalitarian Germany was an anti-Prussian liberal who emigrated from Schleswig-Holstein in protest against the annexation of this Danish province by Prussia, and became an American citizen, marking his preference for Denmark and the United States over Germany by naming his son Hjalmar Horace Greeley Schacht.

Schacht Born in Germany

In spite of his Danish-American name, Schacht was born on German soil. Having suffered financial reverses in America, Schacht senior had been obliged to accept a modest position as a bookkeeper in Germany, so Hjalmar Horace Greely Schacht was educated in the Prussian tradition.

Ironically enough, List also had an American background, having gone to Pennsylvania, where he became an American citizen; but his new nationality did not prevent him from remaining until death the German patriot of Prussian mentality.

List opposed free trade, because it decreased the advantages large nations had over small ones; advocated the economic segregation of Germany from the rest of the world (autarchy, as the Nazis called it when they did it); proposed a similar segregation of all Europe as soon as Germany had succeeded in dominating the continent (Hitler's "New European Order"); and planned the establishment of "European" colonies in the Far East, Australia and New Zealand. He foresaw Germany developing a self-sustained economy within a closed, limited territory; but because the small economic market of such a territory would be a handicap, he envisaged the provision of a market for Germany by the extension of her domination to other countries, for which objective war or energetic measures of "persuasion" not much short of war (the Anschluss, Munich) would have to be employed.

This was exactly the scheme applied by Germany between the two World Wars. First, complete economic segregation of the Reich from the rest of the world by the exchange control instituted on July 13, 1931, followed by complaints that Germany was being starved of raw materials—though they were available to her on the free market from which she had voluntarily withdrawn. The political leaders interpreted this situation to the people in these words: "Poor Germany must starve unless she succeeds in dominating the other nations which are attempting to crush her."

Cleverly Covered Himself

Dr. Schacht, during the years 1929-30, was the artisan of this policy. He cleverly covered himself personally by going into "retirement" just before the key act, the economic seclusion of Germany in 1931. But behind the screen of this alibi, he was still pulling the strings which controlled the puppets. He went on a "private" trip, which took him through Denmark, Sweden, Switzerland, and the United States, meeting everywhere the international bankers who regarded him chiefly as the man who had stabilized the mark (and, they thought, a friend of free international exchanges). But he was actually the trail-breaker for the ideas of the expansionist anti-free-trade List and the political regime of Adolf Hitler. He had picked Hitler in 1930 as the man of the future who would make it possible to put over the List economic plan, and had received full indorsement from the Junkers and the heavy industrialists for this choice. So his trip abroad was devoted to spreading the word among his banking friends that the Nazis were not really dangerous to big business, that they could do business with Hitler.

As soon as Hitler became Chancellor, Schacht returned to the head of the Reichsbank—once again screening the Nazis from some of the suspicion felt about them throughout the world by lending them his own prestige. And ever since then, either directly, or from behind the scenes through his appointee, Dr. Walter Frick, he has been the master of Germany's economic strategy.

President's Message

By Ernest Lindley

Challenge To Pressure Groups

LINDLEY

THE EFFECT of the President's annual message, supported by his budget message, is to draw the line more sharply than ever before between those who put obligation to the Nation above individual or group advantages and those who don't. The two messages promote and defend two basic policies: the prosecution of the war with all the energy which the Nation is capable of mustering, with a view to the achievement of complete victory at the earliest possible moment, and the preservation of the integrity of the dollar, which is another description for strong controls on inflation.

In renewing and reinforcing his position with reference to both of these policies, the President squarely took up the challenge of every important civilian pressure group in the Nation: farm lobby, the business lobbies and the labor lobby. The labor unions have been the spearhead of the opposition to a National Service Act. It was largely, if not chiefly because of their opposition, that the President refrained from recommending such legislation earlier in the war. Although the President did not go into much detail about the type of national service law he favors, he specified that it should be one which would prevent strikes.

MANY COMMENTATORS and editorial writers have stressed the "political" character of the President's annual message. Whether or not it was the speech of a Presidential candidate, it was the speech of a strong President putting the national interest and the citizen's obligation to the Nation in time of war above all other considerations. If it was a "political" address, in the narrow sense, it was an entirely different brand of politics from that practiced by many others who hope to be candidates for Congress or the Presidency in November. If the political path chosen by most of the Republicans and some of the Democrats in Congress is correct, by the practical measurement of getting reelected, that marked out by the President is wrong, even foolhardy.

In the opinion of this column, the President's choice was not the result of canny political analysis. It was formulated largely by the conditions which confronted him. A weaker man would have shrunk from the challenge. Mr. Roosevelt is not weak, and he is conscious of his responsibilities and of his historic position. He has not been even-handed in his management of internal domestic problems. He has shown favoritism toward organized labor. His annual message went very far toward evening the balance.

The President's indorsement of a National Service Act was made contingent upon the adoption of the other four points in his program. This is a valid "escape clause." No one could conscientiously contend that men and women should be subjected to the compulsion of a National Service Act while Congress knocks down one of the barriers to excessive war profits and opens the way for the biggest raid on the Treasury in our history. If the present wage line is to be held and reinforced by a National Service Act barring strikes, labor is entitled to assurance that the cost of living line will be held—and it cannot be held without food subsidies.

LIKEWISE, it seems inconsistent, if not indefensible, to impose compulsory national service while leaving money incomes, of various sorts, so lightly taxed. This is the most ambiguous and therefore the weakest part of the President's two messages. For he implies that most of the additional taxes would come out of corporation profits and large individual incomes, whereas both in equity and to bolster the inflation controls they should come in substantial part from the increased wages of warworkers. The Treasury has dodged or distorted this matter. Congress, however, has no defense for the trivial character of the tax bill now pending. For even with the imposition of excise taxes on luxury goods—taxes which would be paid by all buyers alike—it fell far short of the Treasury recommendation.

Without more active pressure from the general public than is now apparent, neither a stronger tax bill nor national service will be voted, and the wage-price line may be broken. But Mr. Roosevelt, in the face of the group pressures which have cowed Congress, is forthrightly and militantly defending the national interest. Whether this is "smart politics" or not may be revealed in November, but our descendants undoubtedly will read his annual message with greater pride than they read the recent issues of the Congressional Record.

Slum Clearance Hearings Scheduled to Begin Jan. 24

A special Senate subcommittee investigating the District's slum clearance and low-cost housing programs made plans yesterday to begin a series of public hearings January 24.

Witnesses summoned by Chairman Burton (Republican) of Ohio, include the Commissioners, Maj. Gen. U. S. Grant 3d, chairman of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission; Corporation Counsel Richmond B. Keech, officials of the National Capital Housing Authority, builders, realtors and civic leaders.

Senator Burton said the housing problem in all of its ramifications would be discussed at the hearings which are expected to continue for three or four days.

In the early phases of the investigation last month members of the subcommittee inspected houses in slum areas as well as those in low-cost housing developments and collected data on the race and economic status of the tenants.

Findings of the subcommittee will form the basis of a "sound program" for meeting current and postwar low-cost housing needs, officials said.

20 District Men To Join Colors

Twenty men, inducted January 8, will report tomorrow for active duty with the Navy, District Selective Service Headquarters announced yesterday. They are:

Political Climate in Illinois More Favorable To Dewey Than Willkie, Survey Indicates

By George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Jan. 13.—With Chicago picked as the G. O. P. convention city, surveys of Republican sentiment show that the political climate of Illinois is more favorable to Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York than it is to Wendell Willkie.

Although Willkie declared he had no personal objection to the selection of Chicago for the convention, some of his backers were opposed to the choice. The Middle West as a whole, and Illinois in particular, is the center of Willkie's weakness as a candidate. The center of his strength is New England, the stamping ground of Governor William H. Wills of Vermont, who came out with a strong indorsement of Willkie early this week.

The contrast between Illinois and New England so far as Republican candidates are concerned is revealed in surveys by the Institute. In Illinois the top choice at present of the Republican rank and file is Governor Dewey. He receives twice as many votes as the next candidate, Gen. Douglas MacArthur. Willkie and Governor John W. Bricker are the next two choices, running about even in strength. Governor Bricker has gained in recent weeks, whereas Willkie has lost a little.

In New England, on the other hand, Willkie enjoys a marked advantage over all other candidates. An Institute survey covering Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont combined shows him receivving nearly twice as many votes as Governor Dewey. When Governor Wills indorsed Willkie he was clearly reflecting the sentiment of this area.

The vote follows:

	Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont Combined
Willkie	55%
Dewey	29
MacArthur	10
Bricker	4
Stassen	2

A recent survey in Massachusetts likewise found Willkie leading in that State, with a vote of 40 per cent, as compared to 30 per cent for the next most popular candidate, Governor Dewey.

Illinois Passes Bill For Soldier Voting

Springfield, Ill., Jan. 13 (AP).—A bill to facilitate soldier voting in the November and subsequent elections was passed by the Legislature today. Gov. Dwight H. Green signed it with the comment that Illinois fighters would get their vote "regardless of what Congress may do."

'Flesh and Fantasy,' A Daring Innovation, Bows In at Keith's

LIKE CAESAR'S GAUL, "Flesh and Fantasy," the first Charles Boyer-Julien Duvivier independent production, which yesterday opened its premiere Washington engagement on the screen at RKO Keith's Theater, is divided into three parts.

CHARLES BOYER

These three divisions of a picture that represents one of the cinema's more daring innovations are unrelated in either action or personnel and are bound together only by a common theme and psychological purpose—to lay heavy emphasis upon man's power of self-mastery and the banishment of superstitions and fear of the supernatural.

A film of this nature necessarily is lacking in conventional form and dramatic unity. It does not, however, want for romantic and dramatic interest, flashes of humor and occasional passages of great and moving beauty.

For a quick and sketchy parallel, "Flesh and Fantasy," in its general contours, but not in its particularized treatment, is more closely akin to "Tales of Manhattan" than any other recent release. This, perhaps is a natural consequence of the present partnership's having played a prime part in the success of the earlier venture. Mr. Boyer was one of its stars and Julien Duvivier its director.

A Note of Bewilderment

The present subject opens on one of the fleshier of its title's implications, with Robert Benchley torn between the prophecies of a fortune-teller, who said he would be the victim of certain disquieting circumstances, and a dream that insisted he wouldn't. His jittery bibbling is interrupted by a fellow-clubman, who refers him to three stories which he feels will demonstrate to the troubled Doakes that his agitation is possibly just a shade silly. These tales provide the grim, the gay and the imaginative fables which then are visualized by the cameras.

The first is the fantasy of Henrietta, a drab and embittered girl, and Michael, a handsome student she has worshiped from afar without ever even so much as a glance from him. She is counseled by a mysterious voice to choose a beautiful mask, such as she would like her face to be, and search out her beloved in the Mardi Gras. Through the love that springs from this brief association and its revelations, Henrietta discovers upon removal of her mask at midnight that she has been transformed into the loveliness of both face and character she so long has coveted.

Betty Field, in one of her most effective performances; Robert Cummings, as an ardent Michael, and Edgar Barrier contrive to lend this fairyesque tale a greater measure of reality than might be expected.

Best of the Three

In the second of Mr. Benchley's reference works, Edward G. Robinson is the principal figure, as a rich and successful attorney who scoffs at the predictions of a palm reader until all that he says comes true. When "murder" is read in the lines of his own hand, the power of suggestion leads to the most engrossing intervals of the film, engaging the services of a cast of distinguished excellence. After two futile attempts, Marshall Tyler finally does commit a murder—who, why and under what circumstances he murders, you had best see for yourself. The presence of Dame May Whitty, C. Aubrey Smith, Anna Lee and others of like celebrity in support of the Messrs. Robinson and Mitchell insures fascinated interest.

It is only in the final episode that Charles Boyer and Barbara Stanwyck appear and, in this view, theirs is the weakest segment of the picture, although the most flamboyant in its circus background. Mr. Boyer, as Paul Gaspar, king of the high wire, is harassed by dreams of falling, always with the same beautiful brunette screaming in the audience. Until he meets the girl and falls in love with her he is completely unnerved. After that he is his same old self. Then she has to turn out to be a jewel thief in the clutches of the police! Charles Winninger, as the circus owner, a role that fits him perfectly, is the chief supporting player.

Well Written and Directed

All this has been derived with fine skill from stories by Oscar Wilde, Laslo Vadnay and Ellis St. Joseph, by Scenarists Ernest Pascal, Samuel Hoffenstein and Ellis St. Joseph. They have written intelligently and with as much clarity as is apt to be found on the screen in abstruse works dealing with the intangibles of human nature and conduct.

The production is one that lends itself effectively to the mood of the moment, attaining "atmospheric" effects that are by turns fantastic, eerie and startlingly realistic. Duvivier's direction is beyond cavil—as it usually is.

The customary short subjects—newsreel, Disney cartoon comedy, etc.—augment a major feature every discriminating picturegoer owes it to himself to see.

'Cry Havoc,' Gay Stage Bill Open Week at the Capitol

By Marjorie Kelly

Foremost among the merits of "Cry Havoc" is Margaret Sullavan's presence in the cast, and the dignified, severe, and yet sympathetic portrayal she gives of a nurse worn out with fatigue and illness and too much responsibility, who, nevertheless, stays on Bataan to be near her husband in the last months of the delaying action there.

This screen tribute to women at war, which opened at Loew's Capitol yesterday morning, has also to recommend it a generally able cast a restrained direction, and a sprinkling of clever lines.

In theme and treatment, however, "Cry Havoc" is a "Patty Fairchild at Boarding School" sort of thing, with a dugout on Bataan substituted for a dormitory. Rivalries and irritations that spring up between girls are petty and trite. It is not very complimentary to the women who lasted out that grim siege on Bataan. Probably they were at each other's throats—people under strain often are—but it hardly seems they would have quarreled over such stock situations.

Slights Its Subject

The slow direction is proper enough to this sort of play, but serves often only to emphasize the basic lacks of the script. So sombre a story as this, dealing throughout in battle, horror and death, and lacking a happy or triumphant ending, has a limited appeal at best, and loses that if it has nothing significant to say and nothing subtle in its treatment, which is the case with "Cry Havoc."

A comparison with "So Proudly We Hail," a similar film, might serve a purpose. "So Proudly We Hail" also has a large group of women serving on Bataan, and a number of scenes of violence and bloodshed. It, too, attempted to tell the story of the campaign through brief glimpses of the lives of a handful of people in it. The difference is that in "So Proudly" the glimpses were revealing; in "Cry Havoc" you never get really interested in most of the girls and you have trouble telling them apart. This is not the fault of the actresses involved, but the script which gives them insufficient character differentiation.

Joan Blondell as a former burlesque dancer; Ann Sothern as a rival for the affections of Miss Sullavan's husband (who is never seen) and Marsha Hunt, as a veteran nurse, have the best opportunities to register.

Contrast on Stage

In gay contrast to all this is a stage bill headlined by the beautiful Actress Patricia Morison, who, we now discover, can sing. She offers a repertoire of "Begin the Beguine," which, she said, was the most frequently requested of the songs she sang overseas as a USO entertainer; a medley from "Oklahoma" and Gershwin's "Embraceable You."

Funniest thing in the accompanying stage acts is the lackadaisical emceeing of one of the "Hickory Nuts" who does the talking for his three hill-billy companions.

To round out a diverting bill there are also Cookie Bowers, rubberfaced comedian who does animal imitations, the Three Wells, a graceful trio of dancer-tumblers, and Harrison and Fisher, local favorites.

Hollywood, Calif., Jan. 13.—By those in the know, I'm told Billy Cameron Menzies has done a masterful job of producing and directing "Address Unknown." Menzies has been doing a great job for years, but this is the first time he's been entirely responsible for the picture. . . . Sam Wood, before he does another production for himself, will direct Gary Cooper and Teresa Wright again. This will be the fourth for Coop and Sam. . . . Now that Preston Sturges has definitely left Paramount, wouldn't it be a good idea if he double up with Harold Lloyd to do "The Flying Yorkshireman"? It's right up the alley for both those guys, and together they could turn out something really fine. . . . If Bing Crosby and Frank Sinatra sing on "Command Performance" isn't that just a prelude to Sinatra's getting a guest spot on Bing's show? That dull noise you heard the other night was Victor Herbert turning over when Frankie groaned "Kiss Me Again."

GARY COOPER

Swell Yarn

Asking price for John Hershey's "A Bell for Adano" is $100,000. The book isn't out yet. It's a fictionalized story of the war, yet the heavy in it is a perfect description of General Patton. It's the story of an American major teaching people in a small Italian village democracy, and about a church bell to replace the one Mussolini stole. . . . Paramount signed Adelaide Norris of New York society because she looked so much like Madeleine Carroll. When the executives saw her in rushes of "You Can't Ration Love," they ordered her to darken her hair because she looked too much like Madeleine. . . , Hope it's true that Frank Tuttle is considering giving the lead of "Citizen Tom Paine" to Frances Farmer. She sure could use a break.

Got There

Gypsy Rose Lee, who's in Fort Bragg hospital with flu, booked herself at Army camps because certain people wouldn't even though soldiers were begging for her. Leave it to Gypsy to make herself comfortable . . . Johnny Campbell, son of the editor of a local paper, did publicity for "Guadalcanal Diary." He's just been made combat correspondent with the marines, and is en route to Parris Island. . . .

New York, Jan. 13.—A good portion of J. P. Morgan's furnishings will wind up in Texas homes. Y. prosecutors want priorities on David Keith and Richard King; the Virginia badmen who kidnapped a man and a woman and drove them to N. Y., Brooklyn will have first call upon them . . . Newsweek is preparing the publication of a Canadian edition, rivaling that of Time.

The U. S. Supreme Court traditionally meets Saturday mornings in private to plan assignments of opinions, etc. This tradition was not adhered to on December 31. The Justices decided instead to meet late on Friday because the next day was New Year's. One Supreme Court Justice made the decision, per curium "The question before the Court is: Shall we permit our celebration of the New Year to ruin our usual Saturday morning conference, or shall we permit an ancient tradition as to Saturday meetings to ruin our enjoyment of New Year's Eve? Decision in favor of enjoyment of New Year's Eve. Traditional Saturday conference advanced to Friday."

Bob Hope's next movie will be "Duffy's Tavern" . . . June Havoc has eliminated every "Damn" from her role in Mike Todd's "Mexican Hayride." Miss Havoc, sister of Gypsy Rose Lee, refuses to utter any cuss words onstage . . . In the contest to select the 1944 glamor deb, held at the Stork Club Sunday, Katherine Murray, who is related to the Edsel Ford family, almost was named winner. Miss Murray's mother telephoned, insisting that her daughter's name be withdrawn. The servicemen-judges thereupon selected Jacqueline Flynn, a deb who works as a Powers model . . . Jimmy Durante's photo will adorn Time's front cover this month.

Toscanini has not been invited as yet to conduct for the Army's overseas program, "Command Performance." Capt. Meredith Willson asked Frank Black of NBC to take him to the maestro, so that he could ask Toscanini to do a "Command Performance." Black presented him and said: "Do you remember Willson?" Toscanini replied: Willson? Oh, yes—you were once my second flute player. Remember when Amans was sick in Pittsburgh, in 1927, and you had to play first flute? And you made two mistakes" . . . The astonished Willson was speechless. And to this day neither he nor any one else has braved asking Toscanini to do "Command Performance."

Grace Moore's autobiography, "You're Only Human Once," will be published on February 18. The publishers advanced the release-date one month . . . Walter White, head of the Natl. Asso. for the Advancement of Colored People, finally arrived overseas, after long delay . . . Mayor La Guardia has turned down the emergency increase which was to have been awarded to the court employes.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

THE MOST POTENT, backstage big-business lobby in Washington now plugging for lower taxes happens to be financed by the gracious exemptions of the United States Treasury.

The lobbying job is done by members of such organizations as the United States Chamber of Commerce and the Committee for Economic Development, and they operate so successfully because the contributions which maintain them are tax exempt. Any corporation which has profits in the 90 per cent excess profits class can make contributions to United States Chamber of Commerce or Committee for Economic Development practically without sacrifice. Since the donations are deductible, 90 per cent of their donations are paid, indirectly, by Uncle Sam to lobby against his future tax take.

On the other side of the ledger is the unfortunate fact that a fund for liberal causes is not tax exempt. Federal tax courts have just ruled that the endowment created by Robert Marshall to advance the cause of labor unions and civil liberties is interested in "promoting legislation" and therefore not deductible.

But if you are promoting legislation for lower taxes, it's another matter. That can come out of your income tax.

Dairy Diseases

EVERYBODY IS AWARE of the butter shortage, but not many are aware of the fact that dairy herds are being depleted by State and Federal slaughter at the rate of 10,000 head a month in order to wipe out Bang's disease.

This is now the worst and most widespread disease among all United States cattle. Department of Agriculture officials claim they have reduced Bang's disease 50 per cent in the past 10 years, yet it still stands at the top of an unhealthy list, with mastitis next and tuberculosis way down the line.

Ten thousand killed a month is a lot of cows, yet officials defend the slaughter campaign. They say most of the cows are "old cast-off animals" no longer profitable for dairy production. Also, they point out that owners are given the privilege of keeping any animals which may be productive, even though diseased.

The disease produces undulant fever in humans, which caused the death of Edsel Ford.

Even more difficult to combat is mastitis, an infection of the udder. Officials of the Agriculture Department have ample opportunity to observe mastitis close at hand, for the herds of the Soldiers' Home and St. Elizabeths Hospital are both infected. These herds have the best care, and are not pushed for utmost production, as are commercial herds, yet the disease is persistent.

In fact, the combination of Bang's disease and mastitis is making a serious situation on a Nation-wide scale.

Many-Jobs Crowley

WHITE-MANED Leo Crowley, head of FEA, has so many jobs and so many people working for him that he can't keep up with them.

Some time ago, he received a telephone call from Secretary of the Interior Ickes, who wanted to take away one of Crowley's top men, Fowler Harper, to be Solicitor of the Department of the Interior. (Harper, formerly Dean of Law at Indiana University, was brought to Washington by Paul McNutt.)

But Crowley mistook Fowler Harper for Fowler Hamilton, who also works for FEA. Hamilton had just been to London on a mission of economic warfare analysis, and Crowley had talked with him about the trip. So this Fowler was in his mind.

"He's a good man," said Crowley to Ickes, "but he's just back from London and I'm not sure we can spare him. I'll look into it."

However, Crowley later got the right man and told Fowler Harper that Ickes wanted him in Interior.

But the next time he saw Fowler Hamilton, he slipped back into his old error. "I hate to lose you," he said, "but I know you will do a good job for Ickes."

Merry-Go-Round

Isolationist Senator Gerald Nye is facing a tough race for reelection in North Dakota. The decision will rest largely with the Nonpartisan League's nomination in February. If he gets the league, he can swing the State, and he is reported flush with funds and spending a lot of money to swing league delegates his way . . . The Leader, organ of the league, recently printed a first-page letter from Quentin Burdick, son of Congressman Usher Burdick of North Dakota, calling Nye the "No. 1 American Fascist" . . . Herbert Hoover always used to be upstage regarding Alf Landon. Now they are quite chummy—all in the cause of blocking Willkie . . . Census Director J. C. Capt has published a comprehensive calendar of 1944 primary elections showing how they are spread out all during the spring and summer. It shows how important and widely scattered primary elections can be . . . Frances Flannagan, wife of hard-working Representative Flannagan of Virginia, is on her husband's payroll at $1400 a year . . . Blue Star Mothers now number half a million mothers since their amalgamation with Army Mothers Club of America. Michigan's Capt. George Maines helped engineer the combine and Senator Caraway of Arkansas, herself a mother, has introduced legislation incorporating it . . . It will be lucky if any game is left in Alaska when the Army gets through with it. Some of the soldiers hunt with machine guns—a deer just hasn't a chance.

Teen-Age Actor's Stand-in Is 57

Hollywood.—A 57-year-old man today acts as stand-in for young Donald O'Connor, teen-age star at Universal.

The difference in the ages of O'Connor and his stand-in, Bert Keyes, is no handicap. Keyes is about the same height and build as O'Connor, and the two have one bond in common—they both have a background in vaudeville. They joke about it on sets of "Patrick the Great," O'Connor's current starrer with Frances Dee, Peggy Ryan and Donald Cook.

At 14, Keyes ran away from home and became a circus acrobat. Later he carried a spear in an Eddie Foy show, and sang in the chorus. One of his early memories is the fatal Iriquois Theater fire in Chicago in 1903.

In 1914, Keyes started to work as a stunt man and gag writer in the old silent pictures in New York. Later he came to Hollywood and continued as a bit player and stunt man. An injury to his side keeps him from engaging in too strenuous activity.

He's a Grandfather at 37

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

PUC Blindly Favors Utility, Hankin Says

On the eve of an expected decision by the Public Utilities Commission upon the immediate holding of hearings to establish lower bus and streetcar rates here, Gregory Hankin, PUC member, yesterday charged the commission with "blindly giving the company what it wants" while withholding action "for more than a year on petitions, resolutions and motions on the part of citizens' associations, labor unions and others for reduction of fares."

PUC Chairman Flanagan has said that he will bring up the matter of Capital Transit rates before the commission meeting today, although he declined to indicate whether the commission will call hearings "on or before February 1," as requested in a recent motion of the Maryland and District of Columbia Industrial Council (CIO).

Demands Repeated

The motion, repeating demands pending before the PUC for more than a year, requests reduction of the cost of weekly passes to $1 and 4 tokens for 30 cents.

The latest clash between Hankin and the commission majority came about when the PUC yesterday entered an order approving a request of the Washington Gas Light Co. for transfer of legal fees amounting to $24,522.90 from "Suspense to Operating Expenses." pense to Operating Expenses." The company's request for the order was received by the PUC Saturday.

In a statement to the press, Hankin charged that the commission "decided that this order should not be made available to the public." He added "there are probably reasons why the majority would not want the full effect of its action to be known by the public."

Charges Favoritism

Hankin pointed to the "marked difference of procedure" the commission chose to adopt in acting upon the request of the company for "immediate action because it is about to close its books for the year" and the delay of requests by the public.

"I do not believe that this commission should adopt a different procedure for the public than for the utilities, Hankin stated in the dissenting opinion, "and there certainly is no reason why the procedure adopted should favor the utilities as against the public."

Actress to Aid

Celebrities Will Help Dimes Drive

Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, Commissioner John Russell Young and Movie Star Patricia Morrison will be present at the opening at 12:45 p. m. today of the Mile o' Dimes stand in front of Loew's Capitol Theater, 14th and F sts. nw.

The ceremony will be broadcast over WMAL, WOL, WINX and WWDC, 12:45 to 1 p. m. Proceeds from the Mile o' Dimes will be used in the Nation-wide fight against infantile paralysis, 50 per cent to the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis and 50 per cent retained here to finance the care and treatment of local cases.

In 1943 the campaign of dimes raised approximately $40,000—largest sum raised by any single feature of the President's birthday celebration events.

To facilitate contributions, coin boxes already have been put in restaurants and drug stores throughout the city, with pictures of a crippled girl in a wheel chair and the inscription, "Fight infantile paralysis and help me win my victory."

Basil O'Connor, president of the National Foundation, has emphasized that more money will be needed this year because of epidemics in war-crowded production centers. The 1943 toll, which claimed 12,000 lives, was the third worst in the history of the Nation, he pointed out.

Landlord Expected to Seek Ousting of 8 Unsued Tenants

Eviction proceedings against the as yet unsued eight tenants at apartment houses at 2618-20-22 13th st. nw., probably will be filed today in Landlord-Tenant Court, it was learned last night. Suit is now pending against the other nine tenants at the apartments.

Briefs were on file yesterday with Judge John P. McMahon in the latter case. The tenants charge the landlord, Edward C. Baltz, is trying to "unload these three apartment houses on U. S. taxpayers for a period of seven years, with a large income to himself therefrom, if successful." Balz, on the other hand, says he is acting entirely according to law.

Attorney O. R. McGuire stated for the tenants that Baltz was motivated by a desire for higher profits.

Baltz's attorney, Herman Miller, said the proceedings were filed in accord with a statute based on the premise that the landlord is to make substantial improvements in the property. Miller says an expenditure of $44,000 is surely a substantial improvement.

Miller said "good faith" is demonstrated by Baltz's attempts to expend the money to improve the property so as to make available more accommodations for war workers. To this, the tenants reply most of them are warworkers also.

Baltz, during the trial, stated the apartments after improvements would be leased to the National Housing Agency and that he would clear a net profit of $4000 yearly. The tenants reply that there is no real shortage of rooms for white persons here and the conversion is unnecessary. It was brought out, however, that the rooms available are either in the suburbs or else reserved for immigrant war workers.

More Plasma To Be Shipped For Dallas Boy

A second shipment of blood plasma to 4-year-old Billy Meers in Dallas will be made as soon as Gallinger Hospital's blood bank processes the accumulated donations. An initial shipment of 4 pints of plasma, representing eight donors, was dispatched by The Washington Post by plane Wednesday night and was accepted "gratefully" by the boy's mother yesterday.

Billy Meers has been kept alive by constant transfusions for several months. Suffering from an incurable kidney ailment, the boy has been without transfusions since Sunday because Baylor Hospital's blood bank was being exhausted by the child's tremendous demands on it.

From Billy's sickbed, in the meantime, came news that the boy is showing the effect of lack of blood plasma and his mother said yesterday "swelling had set in." The hospital's blood bank still has to receive 60 pints of blood to "balance" the boy's account, which has drained its supplies of 227 pints since September.

Donations since yesterday at Gallinger's blood clinic are expected to be enough for processing another 5 or 6 pints of plasma.

Probers Weigh Rights of Girl Suing Chaplin

Los Angeles, Jan. 13 (AP).—A Federal grand jury started an investigation today to determine whether 23-year-old Joan Berry, who has sued to have Charles Chaplin declared the father of her three-months-old daughter, was deprived of her civil rights when given a suspended sentence on a vagrancy charge last summer in Beverly Hills.

After hearing several witnesses the jury recessed until next Tuesday. United States Attorney Charles H. Carr said the red-haired Miss Berry would be called to testify Tuesday or Wednesday. Chaplin, he said, had not been subpenaed, "although he is free to appear voluntarily if he so desires."

Today's witnesses included Chaplin's butler, Ed Chaney; Mrs. Lois C. Watt, the actor-producer's secretary; Beverly Hills Police Chief C. H. Anderson; Max K. Watt, relief night watchman at Chaplin's Beverly Hills home; and Hedda Hopper, newspaper columnist.

'Competition' Of 49 Federal Agencies Cited

By S. Oliver Goodman

Forty-nine Federal agencies are operating in direct competition with private business, Senator Kenneth S. Wherry told Washington bankers at their midwinter meeting last night in the Mayflower Hotel.

Sen. Wherry

"If private enterprise is to function," said the Republican Senator from Nebraska, "then we must start with the elimination of unfair governmental competition. Twenty governmental agricultural agencies are lending money in direct competition with private lending agencies. Nine governmental agencies engage in housing and construction work. Sixteen in business and banking and four in transportation and power . . . The Federal Government did 23 billion dollars' worth of business in 1943, much of which should have been done by private industry."

Other speakers included Representative Brent Spence (Democrat) of Kentucky, new chairman of the Banking and Currency Committee, and Brig. Gen. Gerald C. Thomas, of the Marine Corps, who told of some of his experiences in the Southwest Pacific.

Prentiss M. Brown, also scheduled as a speaker, was unable to attend because of illness.

The meeting, sponsored by the District of Columbia Bankers Association, was attended by more than 225 bankers, Government officials and guests.

Business Briefs Of D. C. Interest

Two New Branch Heads

Julian O. Cardin, assistant manager of the Northeast Branch of Hamilton National Bank, was promoted to an assistant cashiership of that bank yesterday and designated manager of the foregoing bank. Kenneth O. Hulse, an assistant cashier, was designated manager of the bank's Dupont Circle Branch.

Mr. Hulse has been an employe of the Hamilton Bank since its organization and began his banking career in 1920. He was educated in the local grammar and high schools, is a graduate of the Washington Chapter, American Institute of Banking, Strayer's College of Accountancy, and the Graduate School of Banking, Rutgers University.

Mr. Cardin likewise has been associated with the Hamilton National Bank since its organization and has had 26 years of experience in banking. He is a graduate of the Washington Chapter, American Institute of Banking, past president of the Northeast Businessmen's Association, and a member of the Washington Board of Trade.

Hamilton directors also declared a devidend of 75 cents a share, payable February 1, to stockholders of record January 22.

Four Promted by Riggs Bank

President Robert V. Fleming, Riggs National Bank, announced yesterday that the following members of the bank staff had been promoted by election to the office of assistant cashier: J. George Dagenais, of the foreign exchange department; Miss Catherine M. Krieg, secretary to President Fleming; George M. Irelan, manager, customers securities department. Mr. Fleming also announced that Ralph W. Howard, jr., of the bank's trust department, was elected to the office of assistant trust officer. All other officers of the bank serving on December 31, 1943, were reelected.

The Columbia National Bank yesterday announced that all officers were reelected.

Four Loan Units Elect

Local building and loan associations held annual shareholders meetings this week, with few changes in directorates.

Mutual Building, named Harry L. Claxton a new director. Prudential Building reelected Luther C. Steward as president with all officers and directors being named for another year.

Shareholders of the Enterprise Building reappointed all officers and directors. No changes in the official staff and directorate were reported by the District Building and Loan Association.

Capital Boost Approved

Stockholders of the Morris Plan Bank of Washington have approved an increase in common capital stock from $350,000 to $400,000 and the retirement of $50,000 in preferred stock, Executive Vice President L. P. Harrell said yesterday.

Two New Directors Named

Two new directors have been elected to the board of the Federal Storage Co., Washington, according to President E. K. Morris. They are M. F. Calnan, president of Liberty National Bank, and Robert W. Wilson, treasurer of Potomac Electric Power Co. All other directors and officers were reelected.

The regular dividend of $1 a share on common stock was declared, payable January 25 to stockholders of record January 15.

Store Sales Hold Steady

Washington department store sales in the week ended January 8 showed no change from the level of last year, the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond reported yesterday. Local sales for the four weeks ended January 8 were 3 per cent greater than in the corresponding period of the previous year.

Sales in the Fifth Federal Reserve District in the week ended January were 1 per cent down and in the four-week period showed a 5 per cent increase.

G. E. Reports 32% Decline In War Orders

Schenectady, N. Y., Jan. 13 (AP).—General Electric Co. reported today that more than $450,000,000 of its orders had been cancelled during 1943 and that orders received during the past three months were 76 per cent under those of the comparable quarter of 1942.

The reductions in the new orders received, however, left the company with a sizable backlog.

"The amount of unfilled orders on hand and assured business pending at the close of the year 1943 was equivalent to approximately a year's output at current production rates and prices," said Gerard Swope, president.

Graphically illustrating the cutbacks in the armament program, General Electric's statement showed that for all of last year orders received amounted to $1,360,643,000, or 32 per cent less than those received in 1942.

The trend was shown by these quarterly figures: For the first three months of 1943 orders received were up 41 per cent from 1942; in the second quarter orders were 8 per cent under a year earlier; for the third quarter 45 per cent down, and for the fourth quarter 76 per cent off.

Rail Tonnage Record Forecast

Philadelphia, Jan. 13 (AP).—Railroad freight tonnage in 1944 will increase three to five per cent over the record 1943 total, Caleb R. Magee, an executive of the American Association of Railroads, told the Atlantic States Shippers Advisory Board today.

Between 76,000 and 86,000 new freight cars and 1,200 new locomotives "should be made available by October 1," said Magee, who is manager of the open car section of the association's car service division.

"As of December 1, 1943, there were approximately 36,000 new cars on order and the railroads have applied . . . for authority to build 40,000 to 50,000 new freight cars and 1,200 locomotives," he added.

American Airlines Reports Gains in 1943

American Airlines, Inc., reported yesterday that despite curtailment of equipment mail and express shipments increased during 1943.

The report showed that 26,163,969 pounds of mail was carried last year, compared with 14,634,679 in 1942, while express cargo rose to 20,976,790 pounds in 1943 compared with 11,971,135 in the previous year.

While thousands of passengers could not be accommodated on the airline, a total of 26,039,898 revenue miles flown with passengers last year compared with 27,645,067 in 1942.

Plans for the future include 6878 additional miles of domestic routes, as well as 4385 more miles of foreign routes, all of which have been applied for, the report said.

OPA Loses Verdict In Candy Bar Suit

Kansas City, Jan. 13 (AP).—A Federal court jury today returned a verdict for Mars, Inc., Chicago candy manufacturer, in a $1,235,000 damage suit filed by the Office of Price Administration. It was alleged that the company had reduced the weight of its candy bars without reducing the price and thus had violated price ceilings.

Jerome Walsh, OPA attorney, told Judge John Caskie Collet the OPA would move to have the verdict set aside on the ground it was contrary to the only competent evidence in the case.

The OPA alleged Mars violated the price ceilings for five months during 1942.

Willys Triples Output Of Naval Plane Wings

Toledo, Jan. 13.—Production of the intricate "chest-and-wing" section for the Navy's Corsair fighter plane—involving the assembly of 25,000 different parts—has been more than tripled in the past three months by the aircraft division of Willys-Overland Motors, it was announced today.

The increased output, it was explained by Ward M. Canaday, president, is due largely to the development of a half-mile station-to-station assembly line which permits rapid training of inexperienced aircraft workers.

North American Gas Liquidation Approved

Philadelphia, Jan. 13 (AP).—A North American Gas and Electric Co. plan of liquidation and dissolution has been approved by Judge Paul Leahy in the United States District Court at Wilmington, Del., the Securities and Exchange Commission announced today.

All assets except the common stock of Colonial Ice Co., Greensboro, N. C., will be converted into cash and distributed with the Colonial stock among holders of North American Gas debentures.

The court and the SEC held that there is no equity for stockholders of North American Gas and Electric Co.

Rails Resist Lower Trend In Stock List

New York, Jan. 13 (AP).—Scattered spots of strength among rails and specialties appeared in today's stock market although the general run of leaders continued to give ground moderately.

Individual situations brought bids for favorites toward the last. Much attention was given the President's budget message but it failed to spur speculative or investment operations to any noticeable extent.

The Associated Press 60-stock average duplicated its Wednesday decline of .2 of a point at 50.3. Blocks of 10,000 to 15,000 shares of United Gas Improvement, off ⅛ at 2⅜, helped put volume at 677,989 shares compared with 705,021 the day before.

Delaware & Hudson and Parmelee Transportation were up better than a point each at new 1943-44 peaks. The last named was propped by announcement all the company's outstanding debentures would be paid off in April.

Bonds maintained a relatively steady course. Chicago wheat was off 1 to 1¾ cents a bushel. Cotton lost 60 to 65 cents a bale.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Jan. 13 (AP).—Indications that producers were selling more cash wheat and reports the Commodity Credit Corp. plans to import 40 million bushels of grain from Canada, mainly by freight cars, between now and April 30 caused a slump in all grain futures today. Wheat and rye were more than a cent lower.

At the close wheat was 1-1¾ lower, May 1.71; oats were off ⅜-¾, May 78½; rye was down 1¼-1⅞, May 1.30⅞@7.31, and barley was ⅜-⅝ lower, May 1.21¾.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

On account of Joe Cambria, who has been flushing ballplayers out of the Cuban canebrakes for several years now, the inroads of the Army draft is probably less disconcerting to the Washington Club than any other team in the majors. The Nats are prepared to field a team next season with a heavy Spanish accent.

POVICH

While other clubs are being drained of their ballplayers by the stimulated reclassification of family men from 3-A to 1-A, Clark Griffith is secure in the knowledge that in at least four positions he has available draft-exempt Cubans. They may be no great stars, but like the Army, big league baseball is lowering its standards.

Cambria vows that big Roberto Ortiz and Epitaio Torres, who are playing winter ball in Havana, are good enough to play in the big leagues, and he is beating the drums, too, for Olivero Ortiz, who is a pitcher, he says. But the Cuban with whom Cambria is most smitten is Fermin Guerra, a catcher. "Guerra can do everything, and will make Washington fans forget Jake Early," says Cambria.

For nearly 10 years Cambria has been stomping through the Cuban hinterlands corralling the native kids for Griffith, and no longer are the other big league clubs ridiculing his safaris. Scouts representing the Yankees and Cardinals are in Cuba this winter, bearing contracts. The big leagues apparently are wising up to the needs of the times, even if they don't move quickly. But improvement is noted. Remember, it took 'em 60 years to put numbers on the players' backs.

An erudite race fan who refuses to be stampeded by Bob Considine's opinion on the subject, writes to disagree that "Pericles" is a name without honor for a race horse. This department is no clearing house for Considine's innocent utterings (Hi, Bob), but the customer ought to be heard:

"In your January 5 edition, Bob Considine wrote: 'William G. Helis, the rich and patriotic Greek, named his $66,000 2-year-old colt Pericles. Pericles is a fine name for a Greek horse, but it is also fitting for the racing game. The politician after whom he was named was mixed up in a bribery case in 463 B. C., was tossed out of office in 439, charged with embezzlement and fined 50 talents.'

"Evidently Mr. Considine must have read a different ancient history from what I have studied. In his biography of Pericles, Plutarch writes 'He kept the public good in his eye and pursued the straight path of honor. Money could not bribe him.'

"Hegel in his 'History of Philosophy' says of Pericles: 'We cannot but admire him in the highest degree. He stood at the head of a light-minded but highly refined and cultivated people, the only means by which he could obtain influence and authority over them was his personal character and impression he produced of his being a thoroughly noble man, exclusively intent upon the weal of the state. Aristophanes calls him the Zeus of Athens. . . .'

"Possibly Mr. Considine has Pericles confused with some other Greek statesman. If Mr. Helis wanted to name his horse after some crooked politician it would have been hardly necessary to go back as far as 2300 years. Let's give the young horse a better reputation. —Racing Fan."

That handsome figure of a man who for the past week has been popping the eyes of the stenos in the Pentagon Building is Capt. Hank Greenberg of the U. S. Army Air Forces, who is awaiting an overseas assignment.

It was in May, 1941, that Greenberg took leave of his $55,000-a-year job with the Detroit Tigers for the Army's $30 a month and he has hit all the grades from private (no class) to the captaincy he now holds.

He never expects to be back in baseball, and he gave up the idea, he told us, after his first six months in the Army. "Those fellows who think they can go back into baseball easily, after a year in the Army, are off their reckoning," Greenberg said. "You get bigger and stronger and tougher in the Army, but you lose speed, your ability to break quickly, and the snap in your wrists that hitters need."

Sports Likely to Survive, Despite Threat of Proposed Service Law

By Bob Considine

The whole billion-dollar sports industry in America is hanging these days on a slender thread of circumstance, but the thread is almost certainly to hold fast.

CONSIDINE

If a national service law is ever imposed on the country, the whole structure of professional sport will come tumbling down. You can write all you want about the country's morale factors involved, and bring up the lusty appetite the boys overseas have for sports news. But a man at the War Manpower Commission told us yesterday that "sports never was and never will be classed as a critical occupation."

However, the strong feeling here is that the universal service legislation will not go through unless the war takes a sharp turn for the worse. The President waved the threat over Congress like a baseball bat, to be dropped on the pates of the legislators in the event they do not provide for heavier taxes, control prices and renegotiate war contracts in order to strike at profiteering, during the coming session.

It follows, therefore, that if Congress does accomplish what the President wants it to do, and the war continues to go well, there will be no wholesale roundup of working men and women in this country. That will save the American sports set-up.

The stately decomposition of the caliber of sports will continue, of course, even through the structure of the huge industry remains the same. There will be fewer fathers in baseball and football, and more 4-F's. But there is so much money around the country these days that sports events liberally spiked with militarily deficient athletes will continue to be well supported. Our personal hunch is that the so-called World Champion Yankees of 1943 could not have finished in the first division of the American League of a few years ago, and the same is true of the Cardinals in the National League. In fact, the Giants of 1943 would have had trouble finishing eighth in the league of pre-Pearl Harbor dimensions.

Further inroads into the able-bodied men still remaining in professional sport will be made by the military. It is reasonable to assume also that draft boards, working in cooperation with the War Manpower Commission, will continue the current practice of refusing to allow certain part-time munitions workers to quit their jobs and return to their sports careers.

By the middle of the 1944 baseball season our armed forces will have two million more men than they had last July. Also by next July the war plants will need 1,100,000 more men and women than they had on the payrolls last July. Atop these figures, 100,000 men and women will be needed in the field of transportation for war materiel and war-workers. In other words, 3,200,000 Americans—a vast proportion of them male and muscular—will be called up. Many, naturally, will be teen-age boys who come of military age. But sports celebrities here and there will be plucked out of action and given a gun, or a tool.

The sports team owners don't like any part of this, to be sure. But they are grateful that they can continue to operate with the remnants. National Service Act would take even the remnants. That the public will willingly accept and pay for the dreariest kind of athletic ersatz can be determined by a casual glance at the box-office figures on all professional sports in 1943. Talent that would be the cause of suits by fans against the promoters a few years ago is now being cheered for—there being nothing to measure it by except memories somewhat less exacting than elephantine.

Sports may not have a green light, but at least it has an amber. About the only other eventuality aside from a National Service Act which might put a hopeless crimp in sports would be a host of casualties when our armies lash out across the English Channel. Some Washington authorities have suggested that we'll suffer as many as 500,000 casualties when we finally move. If so, there is certain to be a tightening all down the line of our surplus manpower. And the figure will exceed the number of casualties.

But as things stand now, it is safe for sports promoters and sports fans almost to ignore the implications of the President's speech. It was one of those "if" threats. Congress, faced with an election year, is just about certain to ease itself out from under the responsibility for voting to put every man and woman constituent from 18 to 60 years of age "on call" for war service.

Gonzaga Pressed to Beat St. John's, 33-29

Cadets Ahead Once, 17-16; 2500 Watch

Five rugged youngsters from Gonzaga turned back a St. John's threat in the last two minutes of play to open defense of their Catholic Prep School League title with a 33-to-29 victory before nearly 2500 specators last night in Tech gym.

Gonzaga, a highly favored outfit, won when lanky Chet Coakley dropped in a short set shot with the score 30-29 and the Johnnies threatening to pull the first big upset of the season in the last two minutes of play. Joe Hickson added a foul shot with 30 seconds to play and the game was over before the Johnnies could add the necessary baskets.

Cadets Lead at Half

The Purple, with six victories in seven games compared to the Cadets' won-1-and-lost-2 record, was behind only once, at 17-16 in the last half, and the score was tied just twice, at 2-all and 5-all, but the winners could not pull away from the determined Cadets.

The game was the first in league play as Georgetown Prep, the third member, has yet to make its debut.

Gonzaga led 9-7 at the end of the first period, 16-13 at the half and 26-21 entering the fourth quarter. Their biggest margin was 26-19, and at that point the Johnnies rallied and pulled within a point a few minutes later aided by Paul Durkin's two leaping swish shots and a ball-stealing act and 2-pointer by Tommy Gletner.

Gonzaga can thank the almost unbelievable early shooting of Scott Cranston for its half-time lead. Cranston made five field goals for the night, four of them in the first half and all of them without looking at the basket. He shot while running away from the net, over his head, behind his back, etc., but they all counted.

Use Five Players

The winners used only five players with Cranston high scorer, Coakley adding the most timely baskets and Hickson the star ball-handler and play-maker. Dave Carroll and Bill Kellinger made up the ironman quintet.

St. John's only veteran, George Hughes, led his teammates with eight points, six of them from three neat lay-ups. The Hughes brothers had a horrible time of it in the last few minutes, however, as George drew a technical foul for bounding the ball up into the stands after losing it on steps, and then brother John drew two foul shots with his team three points behind—and missed both.

Pirates Add 2 Games With Chicago White Sox

Pittsburgh, Jan. 13 (AP).—Two games with Chicago White Sox, to be played at Louisville, Ky., have been added to the Pittsburgh Pirates' exhibition schedule, President William E. Benswanger announced today. The games, which make a total of 14 training tilts already scheduled, will be played April 1 and 2.

D. C. and County High Teams In Important Games Today

The second weekend of interhigh series games and the first games in home-and-home series involving the favorite rivalries of the suburbs feature the scholastic court calendar today.

Tonight at Tech gym Coolidge and Eastern meet in the feature end of the interhigh double-header at 8:45 while Tech meets Coolidge at 7:30 in the opener. Of the four schools involved all but Anacostia won their opening games last week. Tech figures to get by the Indians with a minimum of difficulty while the Coolidge-Eastern game is a toss-up.

Bethesda and Blair will play to another standing room only crowd in the Bethesda gym at 8 p. m. Both have disappointing records to date, Blair with six straight losses after winning two straight, while Bethesda has lost all four of its games, but past records are tossed out in the series between the Montgomery County rivals. Blair hasn't won a game in the series in four years.

In Virginia, George Washington and Washington-Lee meet in the latter's gym at 8 o'clock. The Presidents have won six and lost four and have All-State Joe Henley, the red-haired point maker on their side. The Generals have won three out of five.

Tomorrow's inter high series program at Tech brings together Wilson and Central at 7:30 and Roosevelt and Western at 8:45, with Wilson and Roosevelt favored.

Today's schedule:

Anacostia at Tech, 7:30; Coolidge vs. Eastern at Tech, interhigh series games.
Blair at Bethesda, 8 p. m.
George Washington at Washington-Lee, 8 p. m.
Georgetown Prep at Frederick, 3:30 p. m.
Baltimore Friends at Landon, 3:30 p. m.

Lewis, Brown In Arena Bout; Test for Perry

Stoney Lewis, once winner of 13 straight battles here, returns to Washington's ring wars Monday night on the Charley Bennett-Nick Latsios card at Turner's arena. Lewis tackles Mose Brown of Pittsburgh, one-time contender for the middleweight title. They clash at eight rounds.

Lewis' right arm, which he threw out of socket in losing the District title to John Garner, is said to be healed. The colored boy has tried it in bouts in Baltimore and Virginia tidewater rings and says he had no trouble. Brown lost a close decision to Tee Hubert here when making his first start in months.

Over at Uline's next Friday night Aaron Perry, local colored lightweight, considered by many the finest prospect turned out locally in years, will appear in special semi-final support of the 10-round main event, bringing back Billy Banks against Victor Creelman.

Promoter Goldie Ahearn yesterday entertained hopes of pairing Perry with Hubert Samuels, rugged stablemate of Bob Montgomery, but such a bout appeared unlikely yesterday as the District of Columbia Boxing Commission announced the suspension of Samuels due to his failure to appear here for last Monday's scheduled bout with Perry.

Ahearn last night announced that he still is willing to match Samuels with Perry if Samuels is able to clear up his suspension, but otherwise will be prepared to line up another opponent.

Jockey Sisto Set Down at Hialeah

Hialeah Park, Fla., Jan. 13 (AP).—The stewards today ordered Jockey Rocco Sisto suspended up to and including Wednesday, February 16, charging the rider with using unfair tactics in the fourth race yesterday. Sisto is denied the privileges of the jockeys' room and the paddock enclosure during his suspension.

Cutters Resume Play Tuesday On Uline Ice

Coach Mel Harwood's U. S. Coast Guard Cutters of Curtis Bay, Md., have been forced to cancel tonight's originally scheduled ice hockey match with the celebrated Shamrocks at Uline Arena due to the inability of the Shamrocks to gain clearance across the Canadian border.

However, the Cutters are to come right back at Uline's Tuesday night when they entertain the Philadelphia Falcons of the Eastern Amateur Hockey League, at 8:30 o'clock.

The Coast Guardsmen will go out after their third consecutive victory locally, having defeated the H. M. C. S. York All-Stars of Toronto, and Ottawa Commandos, Canadian Allen Cup champions, here.

The Philadelphians are directed by the popular Redvers C. (Red) Mackenzie, who coached the Washington Eagles to an Eastern Hockey League championship in 1940-41 and to first-division finishes in 1939-40 and 1941-42 at Riverside Stadium.

Capt. Johnny (Choo Choo) Mariucci, former defenseman of the Chicago Black Hawks, and Frankie Brimsek, brilliant former goalie of the Boston Bruins, will be prominent among the local favorites returning with the Cutters.

Ruffin Slight Choice Over Larkin Tonight

New York, Jan. 13 (INS).—Bobby Ruffin, New York lightweight, reigns a slight favorite tonight to whip Tippy Larkin of New Jersey in their 10-round main event tomorrow at Madison Square Garden.

Ruffin was made the favorite on the basis of his victory over Lightweight Champion Beau Jack two months ago. This is the New Yorker's last fight before reporting for induction into the armed forces.

Boy Gets 61 Points, Joins Marines Today

Omaha, Jan. 13 (AP).—Rich Lang, scheduled to report for military service with the Marines tomorrow, climaxed his high school athletic career by scoring 61 points on 26 field goals and 9 free throws as St. Joseph High defeated Sacred Heart, 75 to 22, in a basketball game last night. Lang's performance topped his own intercity scoring record of 57 set last year and ran his season total to 153 in seven games.

Pro Grid Loop May Take In Buffalo Club

Chicago, Jan. 13 (AP).—After deliberating for 20 hours while seekers of franchises paced the outer vestibule like expectant fathers, the National Football League concluded its annual midwinter meeting today by taking this definite action:

Inserting the word "one" in place of the word "the" in a section of its bylaws affecting players drafted from colleges.

Franchise applications from Buffalo, N. Y., Los Angeles, and San Francisco were tabled until the league's annual business parley April 19 at the Warwick Hotel in Philadelphia to determine how many teams will operate in 1944.

When this issue is settled, the pro boys can get down to the regular business of drawing a schedule and drafting college players.

The league decided to retain the $25,000 application deposit planked down by a group of five Buffalo businessmen, indicating that the city still is being seriously considered as an operating member in 1944.

However, the $25,000 peeled off by both Los Angeles and San Francisco interests was returned.

"The trend of the times between now and April," said Commissioner Elmer Layden, "will determine to a great extent the acceptance of the Buffalo franchise. We are definitely interested in San Francisco and Los Angeles for postwar operation."

The new rule change affecting players from college ranks was: "The first two players drafted by each club cannot be traded or sold until they have played one season (instead of 'the season') with the team selecting them."

This merely places the player in storage, making him unavailable for sale or trade and thus protecting his football career if he should be called to the armed forces.

Boxing With Army Features Maryland's First Twin Bill

With a shortened ring schedule, the University of Maryland will present one of its two basketball-boxing double-headers of the season tomorrow night when the Old Line courtmen meet VMI at 7:30 o'clock and the boxers clash with Army in the night's feature at 9 p. m. in Ritchie Coliseum.

The entire program has been moved a half-hour to allow Army to catch a train back to West Point. Both the basketball and boxing will start promptly at their appointed times.

Maryland's only other double bill falls on February 5 when the Old Liners entertain University of Virginia basketball and boxing teams. Maryland's third boxing match at home, against U. S. Coast Guard March 4, will not be preceded by basketball.

Both the Old Liners and VMI will be after their first basketball victory as the hosts have dropped four in a row and VMI, after a belated opening, has lost to Woodrow Wilson Hospital in Staunton and the University of Virginia this week. The Keydets managed to stop Virginia's Keith Harder, the Tech High graduate who continued his streak with 17 points against Maryland but made only 6 against VMI.

The boxing match will be the first of the season for both teams but Army will have a decided edge in experience on Maryland as Coach Fausto Rubini has only one regular from last year's team, Alex Bobenko, fighting in the 155-pound class. Most of the Maryland candidates are freshmen and are the survivors of an intra-mural tournament.

Rubini said the Old Liners are in top physical condition, which plays an important part in college boxing, but short on ring knowledge. The Old Liners will repay the visit, meeting Army at West Point February 12.

Two Schoolboy Stars Join Armed Forces

High-school athletics are losing a pair of stars to the armed forces. Jim (Flea) Flaherty, Anacostia's 3-letter man, plays his last game for his team tonight against Tech in the interhigh series and reports to the Army tomorrow.

John Schullenbarger, Coolidge High's football great, takes his final induction physical January 25, along with Ray Haight, a member of the Colts' championship squad who aims to be a Marine.

The President went on to explain that the large majority of employes in the war agencies are engaged in mechanical operations. The postal service, he said, accounts for two-fifths of all personnel in the nonwar agencies. "These facts," the President said, "are too frequently disregarded by critics who fail to look behind personnel statistics to the work the employes do."

Funds recommended by the President would bring about fewer personnel changes than any budget submitted to Congress in recent years. However, yesterday's budget would provide funds for old-line agencies and a second budget to cover the needs of War and Navy Departments and new war agencies will be submitted in the spring.

Major changes proposed are as follows: The departmental staff of Veterans Administration would be increased from 9270 to 11,263 and the field force from 37,282 to 42,331. General Accounting Office would get funds to boost its staff from 11,285 to 14,156, and the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics would be able to expand its office from 4628 to 6042.

Maritime Commission also is seeking funds to enlarge substantially its staff, from 3387 to 4294 in Washington and 6469 to 8281 in the field. Small increases in Washington staffs would be made in National Archives, from 312 to 346; National Labor Relations Board, from 293 to 332; Federal Trade, from 401 to 419; Budget Bureau, 580 to 710; White House, 43 to 53, and the departmental office of Securities and Exchange which is now located in Philadelphia, from 907 to 957.

The legislative staff, Government Printing Office, Civil Service Commission and all other independent agencies and commissions would remain about the same. A small reduction would be made in Interstate Commerce Commission's Office of Motor Transports, from 595 to 557. No funds are recommended for the Board of Investigation and Research, Bituminous Coal, or the National Resources Planning Board.

NATIONAL HOUSING AGENCY: Substantial cuts would be made here. The administrator's office, from 153 to 140; Federal Housing, from 1369 to 1251; Home Owners Loan Corporation, 600 to 528, and Federal Public Housing Authority, from 1305 to 881. The field staff of FPHA would be cut more than 700, from 2778 to 2037.

AGRICULTURE DEPARTMENT: Federal Crop Insurance, increased from 102 to 160; REA, cut from 532 to 512; Farm Credit, cut from 819 to 765; Farm Security field staff, reduced from 9635 to 8459 and no funds are provided to liquidate resettlement projects; the field staff of Soil Conservation would be expanded from 5834 to 7427; AAA would be cut here from 1049 to 905 and in the field from 3646 to 3134, but Food Distribution would be increased from 981 to 1078 here and in the field from 2121 to 2340.

COMMERCE DEPARTMENT: Reconstruction Finance Corporation would be enlarged from 5793 to 6390; Census Bureau from 678 to 1402 but this represents only a small part of Census' personnel, as it does work on contract for other agencies; Civil Aeronautics Board, 322 to 342, but Civil Aeronautics Administration would be cut pretty deep, one office here from 497 to 265 and a field office from 617 to 335. The field staff of Weather Bureau would be expanded from 3229 to 3352, and Coast and Geodetic Survey from 457 to 510 and its aeronautical chart section from 161 to 221.

JUSTICE DEPARTMENT: Immigration and Naturalization's departmental staff now in Philadelphia would be cut from 1450 to 1258 and the field force from 7322 to 6862. The only FBI personnel change would be supported in its field force by national defense funds. It would be increased from 6235 to 6306. Claims division here would be boosted from 142 to 167 and the antitrust division from 88 to 96.

POSTOFFICE DEPARTMENT: First Assistant Postmaster General's office, from 278 to 316; Third Assistant's, 348 to 378; inspector's office, 113 to 129; accounts, 113 to 127, and the equipment shops, 395 to 421.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT: Internal Revenue's office here would be increased from 4932 to 5011 and the field staff from 37,121 to 41,594; foreign funds control, cut from 718 to 711; personnel division, increased from 76 to 88; fiscal service, from 265 to 276; Bureau of Engraving and Printing, cut from 8302 to 8098; procurement division, increased from 333 to 374; public debt, expanded from 2817 to 3290, and the Chicago office where war bond accounts are kept would be increased from 11,193 to 12,608.

State Department would be enlarged from 2453 to 2678 employes and its office for Cooperation With American Republics would be increased from 142 to 153. Social Security Board's Bureau of Old-Age and Survivors Insurance would be increased from 4858 to 4942. Minor or no changes in personnel were proposed in unlisted offices.

Named V-Man Of Week

Bellinger Pinckney, owner of a grocery store at 3311 Connecticut ave. nw., was named the V-Man of the week yesterday by the Junior Board of Commerce at their weekly luncheon in the Annapolis Hotel. He won th eaward on the basis of being cited by the District OPA as the outstanding example in Washington of a grocer cooperating in every way possible with the letter and spirit of OPA regulations.

Sites Asked For 7 New D. C. Schools

A start on a projected public school building program designed to provide adequate facilities in areas where the population influx has been greatest is provided in the 1945 District budget.

A total of $781,500 is set aside for purchase of sites for seven buildings, and $86,080 for preparation of plans and specifications for eight others—five elementary and three junior high schools.

Asquisition of sites are proposed for an elementary school in vicinity of 3d and L sts. nw., an elementary school in vicinity of 15th and Hamlin sts. ne., an elementary school in vicinity of 53d and Drake sts. ne., an elementary school in vicinity of the Peabody School, additional land for building alterations at Shaw Junior High School, an elementary school in vicinity of the Amidon School, and a new junior high school in vicinity of 1st and Pierce sts nw.

Plans and specifications are to be prepared for an elementary school in vicinity of Kenilworth ave. and Barnes lane, ne., an elementary school in vicinity of Stanton rd. and Bruce pl. se., an addition to the Logan Elementary School, an addition to the Taft Junior High School, an addition to the Banneker Junior High School, an elementary school in vicinity of the recreation center at Nichols ave. and Sumner rd, se., a junior high school in vicinity of 9th and C sts, se., and an elementary school in vicinity of New Jersey ave. and P st. nw.

plans and specifications for eight new school buildings—five elementary and three junior high—and $781,500 for acquisition of sites on which to erect them. The explanation is that school facilities are needed in new residential areas.

New Anacostia Bridge

The major project called for in the budget is a start on a new bridge across the Anacostia River at the foot of South Capitol st. The amount earmarked for that purpose is $750,000.

To meet the demand for a substantial increase in the volume of water, $650,000 is set aside for improvements in both the supply and distribution systems. Of that sum $320,000 will be used on the supply system and the remaining $330,000 on the distribution system for mains, pumps and reservoirs.

Recognizing the need for additional recreational facilities, the budget raises by 21 per cent the present fiscal year's appropriation for the Recreation Department. The department is allowed funds for 13 more employes, plus added recreational areas.

While the total budget figure exceeds that of any year in the past, it continues to fix the annual Federal Government's contribution toward expenses of the District at $6,000,000. This, it points out, is only about 10 per cent of the money the District raises through taxation.

Pay for Peoples' Counsel

Although President Roosevelt has failed to fill the long vacant post of people's counsel before the Public Utilities Commission, the budget indicates he may yet do it, and reserves $7,500 to pay the lawyer who gets the job.

Despite the fact that the budget calls for 11 million dollars more than granted the District for the current fiscal year, a breakdown shows that nearly half this amount—$4,029,501 to be exact—will be absorbed by overtime and other additional compensation earned by District employes. Three million more will go into the sinking fund for postwar public works which is to be invested in interest bearing Government securities.

Payments On Loans

To take the District out of debt, $4,883,524 is set up in the budget to repay in entirety the balance it owes on loans from the Federal Government. Itemized, two million dollars will go to PWA, $150,000 remaining on funds borrowed under the Lanham Act, one million for blackout and civilian defense, and $1,733,524 for acquisition of park lands under the Capper-Cramton Act.

In new streamlined form with the estimates of appropriations arranged in a classification which directly reflects the organization of the District government, the budget in an "explanatory statement" calls attention to the financial situation and concludes with this roseate picture:

"By the close of the fiscal year 1945 (June 30, 1945), the District of Columbia can face the future confident in the strength of its financial position, free from debt, and with a substantial reserve established for a postwar public works program."

65 Policemen To Get New Rank

Washington's Metropolitan Police force is scheduled to become more militarized under plans set forth in the 1945 District budget.

The rank of corporal is to be created for 65 privates who deserve a promotion and a pay increase and can't make the grade of sergeant because all the sergeants' jobs are filled.

Aside from having more authority than a private, the corporals would be given a pay raise of $200 a year.

District to Be Free of Debt If Congress Pays Off Loans

With justified pride the 1945 District budget calls special attention to the fact that the municipal government will be free of debt for the first time in 13 years if Congress carries out a recommendation for repaying the entire balance on all Federal loans.

The proposed payments would clean up the District's indebtedness under the $18,150,000 PWA program, 55 per cent of which was in loans; wipe out District obligations under the two million blackout loan authorization, bring the District even with current obligations under the 16 million Capper-Cramton parks and playground acquisition program, and liquidate advances under the Lanham housing and public facilities acts.

While painting a glowing picture of the District's financial situation the budget at the same time warns against over-optimism in view of the demands for public improvements that will inevitably follow the war. The budget points out that general fund revenues which represent nearly 80 per cent of total receipts have been growing in proportion to the upward trend of population, property values and business conditions occasioned by the war.

However, it declares the upward trend in revenues is not expected to continue in 1945, "inasmuch as the population has become relatively stabilized as a result of decentralization of Federal agencies and the leveling off of the employment programs of the war agencies."

D. C. Tries Again To Get New Lifts For City Building

At long last the four squeaky, slow-motion elevators in the District Building are destined for a metal scrap pile, that is, if hard-to-get priorities for new ones are forthcoming.

Years ago when the lifts first began to creak from longevity and hard use, the Commissioners tried to get money for replacements but a parsimonious Congress came through with only enough for a reconditioning job.

Now, it seems, the war may outlast the elevators, and once again the Commissioners' through the 1945 budget, are appealing to Congress for four new ones. Otherwise it may come to a case of stair climbing for them, and their offices are on the fifth floor.

$5000 Designated In '45 D. C. Budget For Recreation

As a tonic for the war jitters, the Commissioners have prescribed in the 1945 budget a big dose of fun and relaxation and offer to provide it through additional recreational facilities.

More play centers will be created under an item of $5000 for land purchases. And the staff of recreational directors will be increased from 74 to 135 to see that games are played according to the rules.

Held in Tire Sale

Harry Sollars, 1101 11th st. se., was held under $15,000 bond yesterday by U. S. Commissioner Needham C. Turneage on a charge of selling tires without ration certificates.

Kidnap Pair Indicted on 4 State Charges

Indictment charging robbery, kidnaping, assault and grand larceny were returned yesterday by the Kings County (N. Y.) grand jury against the two men who last week forced a Washington cab driver and a woman employe of the American Embassy in Havana to accompany them to New York.

The indictments, however, were returned on charges arising out of the kidnaping, bp the same pair, of a Brooklyn taxi driver the same day that the Washington couple was taken to New York.

The Washington kidnaping originated at the National Airport here when Miss Mercedes Platt, 25, the embassy employe, arrived here by plane and engaged the cab of Herman Corman, 22, for the trip into Washington. The men, who were also passengers, commandeered the car at the point of a gun on the way into Washington.

The local office of the FBI said yesterday that the U. S. attorney in New York had decided to take no action on the Washington phase of the case until the State case had been disposed of.

Budget for 1945 Would Add 204 To D. C. Payroll

The 1945 District budget proposes to add 204 employes to the municipal payroll at a total cost of $338,960 a year.

The increased personnel would be scattered throughout the various agencies with the notable exception of the Police and Fire Departments which are now unable to fill existing vacancies because of manpower shortages.

The public school system is allocated 45 more employes, 13 for administrative staff, 17 teachers and 15 for the custodial force. Public welfare agencies would get 25 additional employes, and the Health Department 71 of whom 12 would augment the Gallinger Hospital personnel and 16 would be employed at the tuberculosis sanitorium at Glenn Dale, Md.

Gallinger's principal additions would be an assistant superintendent with a salary of $4600 a year, and a chief medical officer who would be paid $6000.

Letter-Writer Released From St. Elizabeth's

Ms. Elisabeth Williams, 57, who was confined in St. Elizabeth's Hospital for the Insane in June, 1942, after she had made proprecies and complained of injustices in letters to President Roosevelt, was ordered released yesterday by Justice T. Alan Goldsborough of District Court.

Her attorneys, Thomas C. Bradley, sr., and Thomas C. Bradley, jr., proved she was sane and had written the letters in an attempt to get her son-in-law admittance into the country and to obtain his citizenship. No threats of any kind, they said, were contained in the letters, which were of religious nature.

Correction

The address of a fire Wednesday night in a rooming house, from which three Government workers were saved by firemen, was printed erroneously at 1334 Harvard st. nw. in yesterday's Post. The correct address is 1344 Harvard st. nw.

City News in Brief

Settlement Election

Dr. L. F. Schmeckebier was re-elected president of the board of directors of Barney Neighborhood House yesterday at the Community Chest's settlement's annual meeting in the board room of the Union Trust Co.

Other officers elected for 1944 were: Mme. Dreyfus-Barney, Mrs. Charles J. Bell and Mrs. Roberts Wood Bliss, honorary vice presidents; Mrs. Wilbur J. Carr, first vice president; Col. Henry P. Erwin, second vice president; Mrs. John Jay O'Connor, third vice president; George E. Fleming, treasurer; Irving Zirbel, assistant treasurer, and Mrs. Frank C. Baldwin, secretary.

Burns Fatal to Woman

Severely burned when she brushed against an electric stove which overturned and ignited her clothes, Mrs. Lucy Makel, 73, Negro, of 1627 10th st. nw., died early yesterday at Freedmen's Hospital. The fire occurred Wednesday night in a second-floor bedroom of her home.

Onion Shortage Acute

The onion shortage in Washington grew more acute yesterday as dealers found the Government needs cutting deeper into available stocks.

Wholesalers still able to buy them say thay have to (1) get a Government permit allowing their sale and (2) take a half a car load of the plentiful potatoes to get a half a car of onions.

Onions have not been available on the shelves of chain stores for many months now and until the new crop goes on the market they are not expected to be available in these stores.

Mrs. Homan Appointed

Mrs. Helen Walker Homan of New York has been named acting director of the public relations department of the National Catholic Community Service, one of the six participating agencies of USO with headquarters in Washington, to replace Courtenay Savage, director, who is on special assignment with the Army.

Federal Worker Kills Self

Marion C. Campbell, 34, a Government employe, was found early yesterday morning in the kitchen of her apartment at 1727 Massachusetts ave. nw., with her head covered by a quilt and all gas jets turned on.

Neighbors had detected the odor of gas and called police. The Emergency Hospital ambulance was summoned and Dr. John Fawcett of the hospital staff pronounced her dead upon arrival. A certificate of suicide has been issued by Coroner Magruder MacDonald.

'Adopts' British Orphan

Miss Minnie Radner of 1370 Fort Stevens Drive nw., has "adopted" a British war orphan, according to an announcement made yesterday by the Parents' Plan for War Children with headquarters in New York. Miss Radner has agreed to pay the living expenses in England of Clifford Hamilton Perkins, 12, whose father was killed when searching for casualties in the ruins of a bombed building.

Drunk Driving Tests

The Metropolitan Police Department is "withholding indorsement" of Traffic Director William A. VanDuzer's proposed regulation to cut down traffic accidents in the District through a closer check of drivers' intoxication, Inspector Harvey J. Callahan said yesterday.

VanDuzer's proposal would enable physicians to make blood tests to determine an arrested driver's degree of drunkenness. It was prompted, he said, by an alarming increase of accidents which police said were caused by intoxication of the driver.

Reward for Rescue

The Soldier's Medal will be awarded Sergt. Perry E. Walper, 28, of Pittsburgh, Pa., for rescuing another soldier from the Potomac River last summer at the Army Medical Center tonight. Maj. Gen. Shelley U. Marrietta, commanding the medical center, will present the medal in the Red Cross Building.

Sergeant Walper saved Corpl. Philip Clinkston of Saganaw, Mich., from the rapids while the men were swimming.

4685 Ambulance Runs

District Controller of Communications Herbert A. Friede yesterday reported 4685 runs dispatched by Emergency Ambulance Headquarters for the period of four months, ending with the New Year.

Most runs were made by ambulances from Casualty Hospital with 1457. Emergency Hospital made 1152; Police and Scout Car ambulances, 631; Fire Department, 626; Gallinger, 417; Freedmen's, 297 and Health Department ambulances, 105.

Bandits Get $90

Darkening their faces with soot, two bandits held up a gasoline station at New York and New Jersey ave. nw. early yesterday then eluded police by scaling a high board fence after they were chased into a blind alley. One was caught later and held for investigation.

Andrew Currier, the night manager, and two cab drivers who were there at the time, were forced to stand against the wall with their hands up. The men took more than $90 from Currier but demanded no money from the cab drivers.

Four scout cars and a car from headquarters were summoned and arrived quickly enough to see the men jump into a waiting car. The bandits had to abandon this means of escape as police closed in and they ran into the alley and leaped over the fence.

Postwar Discussion

Servicemen and war workers will head a discussion tonight on "Women in the Postwar Era," in a forum conducted by the Jewish Welfare Board USO Club at the Adas Israel Synagogue, 6th and I sts. nw. A religious service will precede the program at 8:15 p. m., with refreshments served by the Synagogue Sisterhood to follow.

More Cream for D. C.

More cream, buttermilk and chocolate milk for Washington consumers was assured yesterday when George Irvine, Food Distribution Administration marketing administrator announced that dairies here may sell 100 per cent of the cream and other milk by-products they sold in June, 1943.

The new order allows dealers to meet 90 per cent of the current demand and also permits dairymen greater leeway in meeting seasonal demands.

Gas Book Conviction

Arthur Black, 50, Negro, of 432 I st. nw., was found guilty yesterday in Municipal Court of illegally possessing a gasoline ration book. Judge Thomas D. Quinn referred the case to the probation office after police testified Black attempted to sell the book to Patrolman S. H. Nutthall for $1. Black said he found the book.

Home Sites Found Here For 130,000

Availability of land for 130,000 additional residents in Southeast Washington and a marked trend toward multifamily housing units in the District area were the main points of reports received yesterday by the National Park and Planning Commission.

In his report on potential residential development east of the Anacostia, Max Wehrly, city planner, said that this community could still more than double its population despite its rapid growth during recent years. Vacant lots, both subdivided and unsubdivided, he found, were available to increase the number of residents from 115,000 to 242,000.

John Nolen, jr., director of planning, reported to the commission meeting that apartment houses increased within the last 10 years from 43½ per cent of toatl housing in Washington to 58½ per cent. Most of this increase was caused by wartime building, Nolan pointed out, atlhough his study included only permanent projects.

Postwar Excess Foreseen

Commission members agreed with Nolen, he said, when he raised the question whether this trend toward multifamily housing units would not result in an oversupply of this type of housing after the war.

The increase of apartment houses was even more marked in the suburban area, where multifamily units accounted for only 1½ per cent of the total housing in 1930, while they now form 26 per cent.

The commission, acting upon a report by Col. Clarence Renshaw, U. S. district engineer, on planned construction of a number of dams upstream in the Potomac River, deferred recommendations until further studies by Frederick Law Olmsted, special adviser.

Plans for the dam construction, designed to give the District additional water as well as power supplies and added flood controls, envisage projects below and above Great Falls. In 1928, the commission advised against building of dams below Great Falls because of the fear of obstructing the scenery.

Giving the go-ahead signal to Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, District director of highways, the commission approved "in general" plans for the construction of a two-level, two-lane bridge in place of the present Klingle Road Bridge.

It also authorized its staff to cooperate with the Public Library in selecting sites for new branches, dovetailing the program with expansion plans for recreational facilities and playgrounds after the war.

Gas Coupons Lead to Arrest Of Four Here

Three men and a woman were arrested last night for illegal possession of gas ration coupons redeemable for more than 25,000 gallons of gasoline.

Sam Kushner, 38, 18 Webster st. nw., was charged with violation of Sections 2 to 8 of the Second War Powers Act after Detective Sergts. W. R. Greenfield and J. O. Curtis reported that they took him into custody while he was attempting to sell some of the coupons to a service station dealer for 60 cents each.

The other two men, one of whom is being held for investigation, were apprehended shortly afterward. The woman, also being held, was picked up at an apartment to which police said Kushner took them. There the remaining loot, all B and C coupons, and several hundred sheets of fuel oil coupons, were found, police said.

Also arrested and charged with illegal possession of gas coupons in anotner case was William Hall, Negro, 20, a waiter of 635 10th st. ne.

Fairfax Man Hurt By Streetcar At Loading Zone

Samuel G. Landon, 39, of Fairfax, Va., suffered serious head injuries last night when he stepped in front of a moving streetcar at the loading platform at 11th and F sts. nw., police reported. He was taken to Emergency Hospital.

The streetcar was operated by Luther T. Cobb, 1725 1st st., Suitland, Md., according to police.

Mrs. Margaret Bridges, 57, of the Meridian Hotel, 16th and Euclid sts. nw., was treated at Emergency Hospital for a fracture of the left hip and bruises received when she slipped when boarding a bus at 12th and E sts. nw.

Cruelty to a Horse

William Opey, 18, Negro, of 1840 Vernon st. nw., was fined $25 yesterday by Judge Thomas D. Quinn of Municipal Court after being found guilty of ill treating a horse he had hired. Earlier this week, a second man was found guilty of the same offense.

Pneumatic Tubes Voted

The House yesterday passed and sent to the Senate a bill authorizing the Bureau of National Affairs, Inc., to place a pneumatic tube system beneath 23rd st. nw., between M and N sts. The tubes would connect the bureau's building at 22d and M sts. nw., with another to be erected at 23d st.

HOPE RIDINGS MILLER

Mrs. Bowles Calls Life Here Simple; She Ran a Farm!

ONE PERSON you won't hear complaining about lagging bus schedules, crowded streetcars, traffic jams, or even the long queues in wartime Washington's jammed grocery stores is Mrs. Chester Bowles.

Recently arrived in Washington from her farm near Essex, Conn., and now settled in a house in Hesketh st., Chevy Chase, the wife of the OPA administrator says life for her is so much easier in the city that she actually feels she has "nothing at all to do."

Chances are, spring will find her back on the farm she has managed single-handed for the past few months; ever since the hired man took off to a war plant job, and her husband came down to Washington to take over a job, and plenty of headaches, at the OPA.

"But I must say life here is simpler," she averred at Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Casey's dinner in her honor the other night. "And the children are having the time of their lives. It's the first time in ever so long they've been able to find playmates without walking miles."

GETTING DOWN to Washington for a two months' stay was more of a chore than Mrs. Bowles ever imagined it would be when she first planned to join her husband. She had to close the house, arrange for somebody to milk the cow and look after the chickens and the pigs, and to keep her posted on any unforeseen developments. But one annoyance she had anticipated just didn't arise—the highly publicized trouble of finding a house in Washington.

Not only did she find one without any difficulty . . . but, wonder of wonders, she was urged to take a maid along with it!

So now, for two months at least, Mrs. Bowles can take it easy. Having arisen every day at 6 to face an unending list of daily farm duties, she can sleep later, run her household and look after her three children here with half the effort formerly expended and still manage to find time to get around in Washington . . . by streetcar and bus.

SPEAKING OF Mrs. Bowles reminds me that the story behind the story of Mayor LaGuardia's recent attack on the OPA Administrator is a lot more entertaining than the one that hit the headlines. "Probably I shouldn't have made any reply at all," Mr. Bowles mused in a manner that implied he was mighty glad he did, anyway. "But after all I couldn't stand by and take an unjust blow like that without trying to defend myself."

Diplomatically soft-spoken, and more than willing to listen to any constructive criticisms that may have bearing on his job, Mr. Bowles is about as far removed from the know-it-all type of executive as anyone you can imagine. Somebody observed as much in his presence the other day.

"Well, nobody could 'know it all' in this spot," he said with a smile. "In an organization as new and as extensive as this, there are bound to be a lot of mistakes made. We've just got to keep them as few as possible . . . and unjust criticism from Mayor LaGuardia or anybody else only adds to the confusion; doesn't help a thing. I just couldn't let it pass unanswered."

A LOOK AT A QUEEN: A recent issue of The Queen, slick paper magazine, established in London in 1861 as The Ladies' Newspaper and Court Chronicle carries the notation that Viscount Hailfax, British Ambassador in Washington, recently received the highest honor in the British King's bestowal, the office of Chancellor of the Most Noble Order of the Garter, formerly held by the late Duke of Portland.

"The Garter is, of course, the highest honour the King can give," says the account, "and not many outside our own and friendly royal houses receive it."

"In recent years, however, no doubt largely because there have not been the opportunities for giving it to foreign royalties, more members of the House of Peers have so been honoured, and such holders now number over 20."

Rachel Crothers Is Recent Visitor Here

Rachel Crothers, noted playwright, who has spent the last two days in Washington, yesterday left here for New York. Miss Crothers is author of many successful plays, the most familiar of which are "Susan and God," and "When Ladies Meet."

Miss Crothers, who not only writes her own plays but directs them, is engaged at the present time in morale-building war work as well as her writing career.

Helen Homan Is Named to New War Job

One of Washington's better known authors, Helen Walker Homan, has added another job to her already long list of war activities.

Announcement is made today of her appointment as acting director of the Public Relations Department of the National Catholic Community Service, one of the six participating agencies of USO with headquarters here. Mrs. Homan takes the place of Courtney Savage, director, who is on special assignment for the Army.

A native of New York, Mrs. Homan came to Washington recently and has been closely affiliated with the NCCS. A writer of considerable distinction, her best known work is "By Post to the Apostles," a best-seller first published in 1933. Last year, it was republished as a part of the morale-building program of the NCCS. Her work with the council has included an eight-month tour of duty as feature editor and several months in the field as club director and program consultant.

At one time Mrs. Homan was in charge of feature publicity for the National Girl Scouts and later served as publicity chairman for the New York Junior League.

In the professional field she has held an assistant editorship of the Commonweal, and for a while was managing editor of the Forum. Among her published works are "Presenting Mrs. Chase-Lyon," "Letters to St. Francis," and "Little St. Agnes."

A member of the New York State Bar Association, Mrs. Homan gave up all her professional activities in the early days of the war and has given over her entire time to the USO.

Generals Fries, Harris to Be Hosts At Luncheon Today

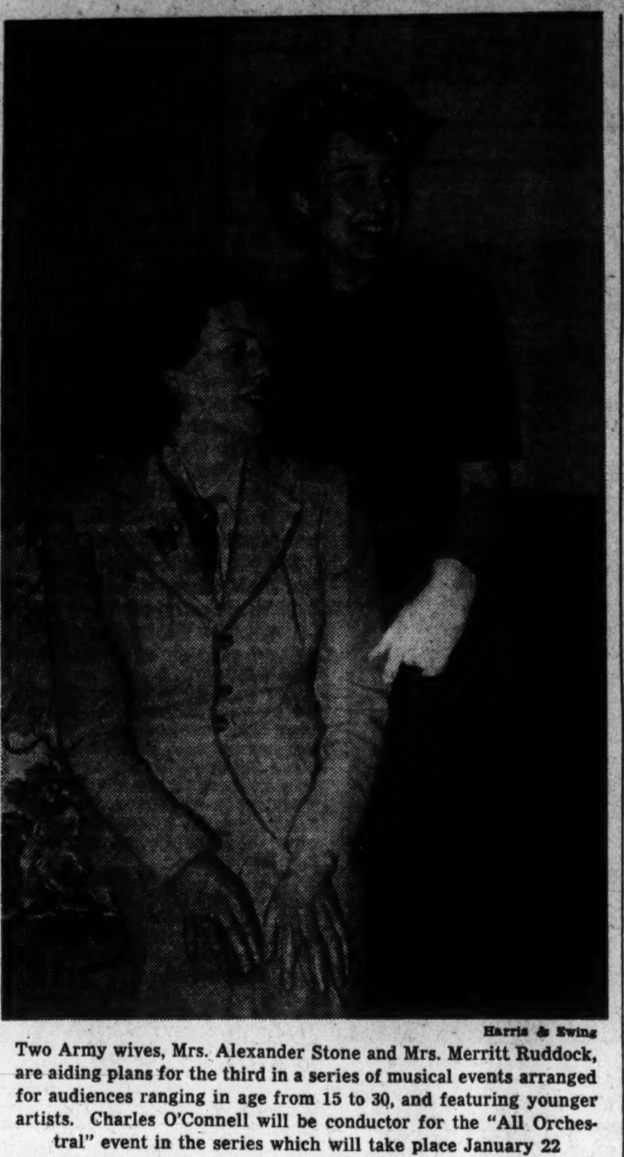
Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Amos A. Fries will entertain at luncheon today at the Army-Navy Club.

Guest of honor will be Mrs. Lawrence Smith, who is national president of the American Legion Auxiliary and is here for the 18th annual women's national defense conference.

Another host at luncheon at the Army-Navy Club today will be Maj. Gen. Peter C. Harris, who will have as his honor guest Warren H. Atherton, national commander of the American Legion.

Accepts New Position

Mr. and Mrs. G. M. Cantwell have given up their residence in Linden, Md., where they have lived for 10 years, and have gone to Boynton, Fla., where Mr. Cantwell has accepted a new position with the Government.



Harris & Ewing

Two Army wives, Mrs. Alexander Stone and Mrs. Merritt Ruddock, are aiding plans for the third in a series of musical events arranged for audiences ranging in age from 15 to 30, and featuring younger artists. Charles O'Connell will be conductor for the "All Orchestral" event in the series which will take place January 22

Mrs. William H. Harrison, Service Wife, Worker

By Elizabeth Henney

"One of the best volunteer workers the club has ever had," is the concensus of those who have had the assistance of Mrs. William H. Harrison for the past year or so at the Soldiers, Sailors and Marines Club here. "And," adds Mrs. Raymond F. Fowler, president of the club, "any volunteer worker who will come Saturdays, Sundays and holidays regularly, without fail and without a murmur is really the tops."

That, in a sentence, is the summation of Mrs. Harrison's contribution to the war effort, and, according to her co-workers, it leaves nothing to be desired.

Trim, smartly dressed, hazel-eyed, silver-haired Mrs. Harrison, with her friendly and youthful bell-like voice and tremendous vitality, has long been a favorite with "the boys." Perhaps it is because she has two boys of her own, the oldest now in the service, the younger studying medicine at college.

Though not of the "old Army," in fact she and her husband became connected with the service at the beginning of the war, both have taken to service ways like ducks to water. Oh, yes, just incidentally, her husband, formerly with American Telephone & Telegraph, is now Major General Harrison of the Signal Corps. It was when he came down to Washington for duty, that Mrs. Harrison closed up the family home on Long Island and came down to see how she could do her bit. And that she has been doing consistently and untiringly since her arrival here.

One of the favorite stories around the club and one which the staff thinks best illustrates her willingness to be helpful is the story of the soldier and the frantic 'phone call. It seems one day when Mrs. Harrison was on the desk the phone rang and a voice said in desperate tones something like this:

"Look, I went off and left a book there and it's terribly important to me, and I can't come back for it, 'cause if I did I'd be late getting back to camp. Would you please ma'am, find it for me and hold it until I come in next weekend. It's the third table from the left in the lounge."

Mrs. Harrison promised faithfully to secure and hold the volume, and breathing a sigh of relief, the soldier hung up. She hurried off, expecting to find a rare collector's item or at least an important textbook. She finally located the book, right where the soldier said he'd left it. The title—"How To Make Mabel In Six Easy Lessons."

Visitor at Swiss Legation

Mme. Lobkowicz, wife of the Czechoslovak Ambassador to England, is the guest of the Minister of Switzerland and Mme. Bruggmann, who entertained at dinner in her honor last evening.

Tonight they will be hosts at another dinner at which ranking guests will be the Czechoslovak Ambassador and Mme. Hurban.

Guggenheims to Leave For Southern Resorts

Col. and Mrs. M. Robert Guggenheim will leave January 22 to spend the remainder of the winter and early spring in the South.

They will go first to Charleston, S. C. to visit Colonel Guggenheim's family and from there will go to Palm Beach, where they have taken a villa until April 1. Colonel Guggenheim went to New York last night and is expected to return this evening.

Paul McNutt On Tour of Middle West

On the heels of the national service law uproar comes the 10-day tour of the Middle West by Paul V. McNutt, War Manpower Commission chief, who left Tuesday evening for stops in Indiana, Kentucky, Chicago, Ill.; Detroit, Mich., and Cleveland, Ohio. He is on a speaking tour and is investigating the manpower situation, particularly in critical areas, as Detroit, is termed.

He will return to Washington in about 10 days. Mrs. McNutt did not accompany him.

Chilean Officers Due

Col. Walton Ojeda, director of the Chilean Army Cavalry School, and Col. Juan Bertossi, director of the Engineering School, arrived in Miami, Fla., yesterday from Chile, and will leave for Washington today. They have been invited by the War Department for a tour of United States training camps.

J. C. White, Minister of Haiti, Nominated Envoy to Peru

Now before the Senate for congressional approval is the recent presidential nomination of John Campbell White as Ambassador to Peru.

Mr. White, Minister to Haiti since 1940, will succeed R. Henry Norweb, if the appointment meets with the Senate approval.

Mr. White was born in London of American parents and studied at Harvard University Law School before embarking on a varied diplomatic career in many parts of the world. Since his early connections with the State Department, Mr. White has been assigned to Petrograd, Athens, Tokyo and Bangkok.

He was appointed counselor of the Embassy in Berlin in 1933 and later served as consul general at Calcutta, India, and Kebaul, Afganistan. He has served as charge d'affaires at numerous posts and before his appointment to Haiti was diplomatic agent and consul general at Tangier.

Mr. White's diplomatic relations with the State Department in Washington has made his name familiar in official and social circles. He is a member of the American Geographic Society and the Metropolitan Club here.

Mr. Norweb, present Peruvian Ambassador, has served at many posts in South America. There has been some speculation as to his new assignment, but as yet there has been no official announcement from the White House.

United Nations Club To Have Musicale

Dumbarton Oaks, former home of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss, will be opened for the United Nations Club on the evening of January 19. Mrs. Dorothy Clark Norman, composer-pianist, who has appeared twice before for the United Nations Club, will be on the program. Also taking part will be Luck Roberts, pianist; Lena Sanford, singer, and Andy Razaf, composer.

Young Mother Asks Help in Overcoming Fear, Which Has Haunted Her in Everchanging Forms All Her Life, and Now Centers on Child's Health

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I hope you may be able to help me overcome a neurosis which is tormenting me almost unbearably. To all outward appearances, I am sane, sensible and amiable. I am 28, the mother of a daughter aged 3, and am expecting another infant in the near future. A year ago, my husband was transferred to this community,—many miles away from my home folks; the first time I have ever lived any place except in the city of my birth.

In the past year, I have made many friends (or at least friendly acquaintances), and have a very enjoyable social life. Although I am strongly attached to my parents and relatives, I do not believe living away from them is responsible for my phobia, namely: worry. All my life I have worried about something. When I carried my first child, I worried the entire time for fear I would die in childbirth,—a fear I never confided in anyone until now. I realized then that the fear was not normal; but seemed powerless to cast it off. I had a perfectly normal delivery and a healthy infant, who has been a minimum of bother.

During this second pregnancy, I have not once feared for myself. I have another worry: my youngster. She is rarely ill, but I worry constantly, lest she may be ill; and on the rare occasions when she is ill I never (like a normal person) think: "It is probably measles." I think of the worst imaginable ailment and can't eat or sleep until she is better again. I become simply panicky with fear that something may happen to her. If I read an article on a disease, I imagine my child is getting it. Recently, I read an article on rheumatic fever. Since then, I have noticed my daughter seeming to feel her leg, as if she might have muscle cramp; and I worry to distraction.

THE WORST of it is, I can't make myself confess this to a soul. All this fear is pent up in me. I have seen these same worry traits in my parents,—my mother was similar at my age,—though they seem to have outgrown their worries. My husband is no help with the problem; because I think that secretly he worries the same as I, when our youngster is ill: until the doctor reassures him, and then he can dismiss the fear from mind. I do believe a psychiatrist could help me; but I am miles away from any. I feel if I could just put my mind on a different "beam," so to speak, I could develop a philosophy of "what is to be, will be." Please help me, if you can.

B. R. O.

She Senses Truth Like Sleeper With Nightmare

DEAR B. R. O.: You have an anxiety neurosis, which means that your phobia amounts to a pernicious habit of worry, ingrained in early childhood, due to association with and dependence upon chronically worrying parents, whose nameless "fears of the worst" (that never came to pass!) caught on like malignant germs in your subconscious mind and have continued ever since to inflame and torture your lively imagination. The fact that the fancied cause for "distraction" wears a new false face every year, so that you no sooner live through one panic-seizure than you immediately come to grips with another, of equal ferocity, that seems to be attacking from a different direction, plainly shows that you "have nothing to fear but fear,"—as President Roosevelt told the people of this country in his first inaugural address.

You already recognize this truth, in a remote unavailing sort of way, even at the height of your recurrent panics,—much as a sleeper experiencing a hideous nightmare often-times "knows" and reassures himself in his sleep that this is only a bad dream. But you need to have strong objective affirmation of this truth, from someone whose wisdom and veracity you trust, who has listened, with understanding, to the long story of your pent-up fears. Once you bring this "fear of fear" out into the open, and subject it to straightforward discussion with almost anybody who knows enough about psychology to see and define your problem as a hangover from an inexplicably fear-ridden childhood, so that it is no longer a dread and secret skeleton without-a-name in the closet of your mind, you will begin to throw off its bogeyman's spell, for good and all.

Lacking Counsellor Help, Reading Is Best Lifeline

SINCE YOU are out of reach of first-hand psychiatric counsel, you might turn to a sensible physician for the help you need. Many doctors of medicine are beginning to incorporate the most advanced principles of mental-hygiene in their diagnosis and treatment of patients; and, indeed, the outstandingly able "family physician" down through the ages invariably brought instinctive knowledge or wisdom of this sort to bear, in relieving bodily and "nervous" ails. However, if you can't find this type of doctor in your community, do not despair. You can help yourself through reading,—if you must; and if you will.

Your problem of obscurely rooted, hydra-headed fear is common to the race. (As Lewis Browne wrote in the opening sentence of his book, This Believing World,—"In the beginning there was fear.") Innumerable men and women have set themselves free of the toils of neurotic fear; and their release, self-wrought, usually has been achieved through growth of spiritual understanding and spiritual faith. Some of these self-emancipated souls have passed on their experience-in-growth to their fellows, in the form of books. One of the finest of these books is Basil King's "The Conquest of Fear,"—now practically a classic, which has paved the way to social and psychological redemption for countless people who had been in worse condition than you. I recommend this book to you,—as an immediate, dependable lifeline. Study it hopefully, apply its principles confidently, and you should be helped beyond your fondest hopes.

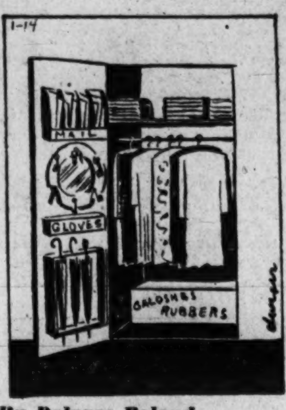
It's About Time



By Dolores Boland

Efficient Set Of Exercises Trims Waist

(This is the second week of a special series by Ida Jean Kain to help you get in trim. Follow her suggestions to reduce or gain weight and normalize your measurements. The program will put a sparkle in your eyes and elasticity in your step.)

By Ida Jean Kain

As a rule, business women are as cagey about their age as if it were a military secret—not from vanity, but in the interest of survival.

But a gal doesn't have to tell her age to give it away. Her figure can date her with ruthless accuracy, and especially that traitorous middle measurement, the waistline. Every excess fraction of an inch on the waist tacks about a year onto the age she can pass for.

If you put on weight, the fat seems to make a beeline for your waist. Even without excess weight, this measurement is hard to keep in bounds because it is where your figure starts to settle down.

A really efficient set of exercises will keep your waist trim and will also help to firm your abdominal girdle. Let's start with my old favorite:

POSITION: Lying on back on floor, knees flexed and feet on floor close to hips, arms stretched up on floor overhead.

MOVEMENT: Keeping shoulders and upper back on floor, pull up and in with the lower abdominal muscles and press small of back flat against floor. Then, slowly twist at the waist and touch thighs to floor, first on one side, then the other.

POSITION: Sit on floor with legs straight and wide apart, arms straight out at sides in line with shoulders.

MOVEMENT: Stretch through the midsection and hold it as you spin sideward to touch left hand to outstretched right foot. Stretch up, and spin to other side. Keep your back straight throughout and do the bending from the hip-joints. Continue for 10 counts, later 20.

Conservation of Fabric Is Keynote of Spring Fashions

By Dorothy Roe

New York (AP).—The 1944 spring silhouette is stripped for action, shorn of gew-gaws, austere in cut, flamboyant in color.

New York's spring openings, presented this week for visiting fashion editors from all sections of the country, present a theme of conservation of fabric which goes far beyond the limitations of the War Production Board.

Skirts are skin-tight, jackets are ever briefer, sleeves in summer dresses and blouses are practically nonexistent. The short dinner dress remains the overwhelming favorite, although a few floor-length styles are returning.

There is an echo of World War I in many of the collections, with a hint of the hip-belted, straight-line styles of the flapper age. Thus far, however, even when dresses flaunt wide sashes tied squarely around the hips, the waistline is still fitted, and there is no tendency toward the flat-chested vogue of the 20's.

MARTHA ELLYN'S PLATTER CHATTER

Thick, Nourishing Soups Good for Main Dish

It's about time that the soup tureen were brought out of retirement. This piece of china offers many possibilities. A sturdy soup ladeled from an attractive old soup tureen will arouse more interest from diners than a single soup bowl set before them. This too is a good way to meet the ration challenge and also save time. Nutritious, appetizing soups may be made from many low-point cuts of meat. Bits of vegetables, cereals, fish and other foods can be utilized in a soup-tureen meal.

Martha Ellyn

A meal built around a sturdy soup may be eaten by children as well as oldsters. This eliminates any extra cooking to meet the needs of little ones. On these cold winter evenings, big bowls of soup, a tender hot bread and a crisp salad assures the cook that she is doing both her patriotic and nutritional duty. And this is a time when a rich, generous dessert will not be without bounds. Remember the beverage—fragrant, steaming coffee or tea for grownups and milk for the children. Of course there's no rule against adults' drinking milk if they prefer.

The list of soups from which to make a choice is long. Two hearty soups that make use of pork and beans are navy bean soup made from ham bone, and baked bean soup with crispy bits of salt pork. Split pea or lentil soup, too, with sliced frankfurts, is an appealing dish.

Vegetable soup can be made from point-free back or neck bones, or trimmed out bones from a rolled roast. Odds and ends of foods can be utilized glowingly in many soups.

Lucky is the cook who has a soup tureen, for this way of serving soup has virtues. It's a more dramatic approach to a meal, keeps the soup hot, and is often a topic of conversation.

Each section of our country has its traditional hearty soup. Clam chowder in Maine, oyster stew in Vermont, Pepper Pot in Philadelphia, ox-tail in Texas, vegetable in the mid-West, Brunswick stew in Virginia.

It's easy to plan a soup meal. All the rules of nutrition may easily be followed. The accompanying foods should complement and supplement the soup. Following are suggested menus using hearty soups as the piece de resistance.

Dinner Menu

Navy Bean Soup
With Sliced Frankfurts
Tossed Vegetable Salad
Corn Bread
Apple Crisp Beverage

The following recipe for Navy Bean Soup will serve four. Lentils, black or lima beans can be used. If you want to make the soup something really special make it with ham bone stock instead of water.

Navy Bean Soup

Soak 1 pint dried navy beans for several hours or overnight. Drain. Add 2 quarts water. Fry 1 cup sliced onions and 1 cup diced celery in 3 tablespoons fat. Add to beans and simmer 3 to 4 hours or until beans are soft. Add more water as water cooks away. When tender take out 1 cup beans. Rub the remaining beans through sieve. Reheat to boiling point. Add ½ tablespoon salt, ⅛ teaspoon pepper, ¼ teaspoon mustard. Garnish with 4 frankfurts and the whole beans. Serve piping hot.

Dinner Menu

Vegetable Soup
Toasted English Muffins
Calavo-Orange Salad
Chocolate Bread Pudding
Beverage

The following recipe includes a number of ingredients but the ones you like can be used and others eliminated.

Vegetable Soup

Place soup bone and 1 quart water in large kettle. Add 1 diced onion, 2 sprigs minced parsley, 3 stalks celery diced with leaves and, 1 sprig fresh minced thyme. Cook at low heat for 1 hour. Add 1 cup lima beans, 4 fresh tomatoes, 1 cup each of turnips, carrots and potatoes, diced, 1 cup shredded cabbage, 1 small red hot pepper and salt and pepper to taste. Cook 3 to 4 hours. Serve steaming hot.

Cricket on the Hearth

Watch out for crickets this winter. As outdoor food supplies become scarce, field crickets may enter houses and become serious pests, damaging curtains, rugs and other household fabrics.

A good poison bait is made by mixing 2½ pounds of bran with 2 ounces of sodium fluosilicate, 1½ cups molasses and 5 cups water for the average-sized house. The bait should be placed along baseboards and near cracks and other hiding places. Children and pets should be kept away from it.

Training Received by WAVES Prepares Them for Postwar Life

Placing a million dollar order for supplies—scheduling the conversion and distribution of salvaged, damaged battle equipment—analyzing lumber contracts—estimating allowances of supplies for advance bases—directing the transportation of officers' household goods—and revising the Navy Cook Book! These are but a few of the man-sized responsibilities falling on the shoulders of WAVES on duty with the Navy Supply Corps.

WAVE photographer Margaret G. Weeks, for instance, was a photographer of babies and children in New Iberia, La., before joining up. Now assigned to the Bureau of Aeronautics, she is getting additional training under the direction of ace photographer, Lieut. Comdr. Edward J. Steichen.

Ensign Kathleen Lux, who received a civil engineering degree from Purdue University just last year, is another WAVE who is adding to her store of knowledge. She is now on duty in the Bureau of Yards and Docks, Washington, D. C., as an assistant in the office of the director of the construction department. Ensign Lux is the first woman member of the Navy's Civil Engineer Corps which was formed in 1867.

Nora Anderson, Specialist (T) Third Class, used to be a long-distance telephone operator. She was graduated from the WAVES' Link Instrument Trainer Instructor's School where she learned to instruct Navy pilots in instrument flying. During her free Sundays, Miss Anderson has gained her student pilot's license and is now working for a private pilot's license.

ENGAGEMENTS

Daughter of Former Polish Counselor To Be Bride of Holmes H. Welch

Witold Wankowicz, former Counselor of the Polish Embassy, and Mme. Wankowicz, announce the engagement of their daughter, Mary Romana, to Holmes H. Welch, son of Mrs. Roger Wolcott of Milton, Mass., and E. Sohier Welch of Boston.

Miss Wankowicz attended the Zbylitowska Gora school in Poland and was graduated from Georgetown Visitation Junior College. She is also a graduate nurse, having her training at Union Memorial Hospital in Baltimore.

Mr. Welch attended Brooks School and Harvard University. He was a member of the Hasty Pudding Institute of 1770; the Signet Society, and was also secretary of the Harvard Advocate. He is now with the State Department. No date has been set for the wedding.

MISS MARY ROMANA WANKOWICZ

The bride-elect came to Washington when her father was appointed Counselor of the Polish Embassy in 1936. Mr. Wankowicz left the embassy in 1939 when the Nazi's conquering of Poland forced a reduction in the staff. Some years earlier Mr. Wankowicz was here as Commercial Counselor of the embassy. He is now with the British Supply Mission.

The bride-elect's sister, the former Miss Irene Anne Wankowicz, is now Mme. Stanislaw Kazimierz Chosciak-Popiel, and is living in Poland. Her husband is a prisoner of war.

McLeish-Attaway

Mr. and Mrs. Alexander McLeish of Port Chester, N. Y., announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Mary Sinclair McLeish, to Lieut. (j. g.) Thomas William Attaway, USNR, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lee Attaway of Fitzgerald, Ga.

Miss McLeish is a graduate of Port Chester High School, New York. She also attended Hillhead High School in Glasgow, Scotland, and the Central Park School of Art in New York City. She is now a member of the staff of the British Embassy in Washington, D. C.

Lieutenant Attaway was graduated from the University of South Carolina. He is at present stationed at the Amphibious Training base, Little Creek, Va., where he is a group commander in attack boats.

Wings Hosts to Conservationists

Ramos—the rare old drink that makes visitors to and natives of New Orleans relish a return—will be served by the Newton C. Wings at their Bethesda home this afternoon from 5 to 7 o'clock when they entertain several friends. Guests will include leaders in the Bethesda community, along with officials in the salvage programs of the Government, whose extensive conservation campaign was launched this week.

Purely Personal News And Notes

The Ambassador of Guatemala and Senora de Recinos entertained at a farewell dinner last evening for the retiring Ambassador of Bolivia and Senora de Guachalla. The Mexican Ambassador and Senora de Castillo Najero were among the guests.

Mme. Diamantopoulos, wife of the Greek Ambassador, has issued invitations for a buffet supper on Thursday evening, January 20, at the Embassy.

The Counselor of the Finnish Legation and Mme. Toivola were hosts at an informal dinner last evening. The Counselor of the Polish Embassy and Mme. Kwapiszewska were ranking guests.

Miss Flora Lewis, daughter of Mrs. George Chase Lewis, and Lieut. Clement Russell Phelps, USNR, whose marriage will take place tomorrow were the guests in whose honor Lieut. and Mrs. Walter Kemp entertained at an informal party last evening.

Mrs. Gilbert Hitchcock has returned to her home on Kalorama rd. after a visit of six weeks with relatives in Memphis, Tenn. and Omaha, Nebr.

Comdr. Paul Ryan Visitor in Capital

Lieut. Comdr. Paul B. Ryan, who has been on submarine duty in the Southwest Pacific, left Washington yesterday for Boston, Mass., where he will visit his parents.

While in the Capital he was the guest of Lieut. Comdr. and Mrs. Gordon Fowler.

The Gentler Sex

By Malvina Lindsay

Down to Earth

"For the first time since Pearl Harbor the college graduate cannot find a bargain on the job counter."

—EDITH G. STEDMAN, director, Radcliffe College Appointment Bureau.

Can this be an omen of the return of the good old days in offices, the days when:

Bright young women in a hurry didn't move on from job to job every few weeks because they were not "getting anywhere" fast enough or weren't having a chance to "express" themselves;

The newest office helper didn't decide after the first two weeks she was wasting her time on detail and needed an assistant or a "little secretary" to handle the routine while she gave birth to big ideas;

A boss could present a request or issue an order without feeling like a worm;

An executive with a piece of work to have done was not totally unable to find anyone who would admit that it belonged in her "department" or was what she was "supposed" to do;

An employe would be willing to continue for a few weeks at least doing work that she did not find "fascinating," or providing "interesting contacts";

A job applicant did not put an employer through the third degree;

The boss was a Simon Legree or at least a cranky, fussy old curmudgeon whom everyone dodged around corners to avoid, instead of a groveling fellow trying to keep appeased a lot of heity-toity young women?

Headlines of Peace

Not in the headlines of this morning's press,
Or yesterday's; or those of other years,
Is peace proclaimed. A truce, or victory, yes,
A brief assuagement of a Nation's fears!
It is no headline news that God may bless
A mother's prayer, or dry a widow's tears.
For war or armistice, the presses roll;
Headlines of peace are printed in the soul.

H. C. KINCAID, M. D.

First Things First

I'm sick of mooney love songs,
I can't stand any more,
I'm sick of Frank Sinatra,
I'm sick of Dinah Shore;
I'm sick of soppy sob stuff,
Radio programs wailing "You-oo,"
Let us cease these maudlin vapors,
We have got a job to do;
For in mud and cold and jungle,
Amid shell and flak and gore,
Our boys are fighting for us—
Let us get on with the war!

HARRIET T. COOKE.

Today's Social Notes

(From The Truthtown Torch.)

The Ladies Parachute Patrol is stepping up its activities to synchronize with those of the Allied forces. The patrol has had its clubhouse redecorated, the furniture reupholstered and has new supplies of linen and silver and a new punch bowl. "Since it is too cold for us to drill during the next two months," explained Mrs. Badminton Bellwether, commander, "we expect to hold a great many meetings. We also will do much committee work."

Realists Inc.

A rush on the part of old-line, conservative aristocracy to join the new organization Realists, Inc., is expected by Mrs. Adam Stalactite, who is sponsoring the movement. "Since it is becoming quite the mode to call one's self a 'realist,'" said Mrs. Stalactite, "those of us who were the original realists felt that we should take measures so that we would not be confused with these later upstart realists.

"For instance, we want it definitely understood that we are not the same type of realist as this man, Stalin, claims to be—nor even as President Roosevelt, who recently had the nerve to call himself a realist. Our membership requirements will be very strict. Applicants will have to prove that for at least four generations back their families have had no connection with visionaries, dreamers, idealists, mugwumps, party bolters, reformers, revolutionaries, excepting of course the revolutionaries of 1775) and other crackpots bent on improving the social, political or economic scene."

Armour Ideas Make the Most of Meat

Here are Hamburgers Deluxe!

Yes, it's a grand solution to that perennial problem, "What shall I serve?" It's Hamburgers Deluxe . . . a big, substantial feast of good beef flavor—perfect for a family dinner or even a party supper.

You'll need so few ration stamps to serve these tasty hamburgers, that entertaining will become a pleasure once again! Just ask your meat man for 1 lb. of Armour's ground beef chuck, flank, round or neck. We suggest Armour's beef for it's both tender and delicious . . . makes wonderfully juicy, tasty hamburgers. And what's more, Armour's beef is rich in proteins and other essential food values.

Mix the meat with 1¼ tsps. salt, ⅛ tsp. pepper, 1½ tbsps. minced onion and ⅓ cup undiluted evaporated milk. Shape into 6 flat patties. Heat 2 tbsps. bacon drippings in frying pan and put in patties, browning 3 minutes on each side. When cooked, transfer to halves of English muffins or buns which have been buttered and toasted. Serve with tomatoes and onion slices.

Yule Seal Sale Raised $13,214 In Montgomery

A total of $13,214.08 has been obtained in the Christmas Seal Campaign of the Montgomery County (Md.) Tuberculosis Association Mrs. Louise A. Gravelle, receiving chairman, announced yesterday.

With contributions still being received, Mrs. Gravelle stated that only 8 per cent of the 8468 envelopes opened by her volunteer assistants contained no contributions. Many donors paid at booths set up in various parts of the county.

Mrs. William N. Morell, seal sale chairman, yesterday in an open letter to county residents, thanked them for their "generous support," which has made it possible to begin the 1944 program. Several items needed in equipment including a fluorscope recommended by Dr. V. L. Ellicott, county health officer, have been ordered as a result of the sale returns, she stated.

'Victory Baby' Chosen; Dad Has Never Seen Him

Four-month-old Paul Wayne Robinson, jr., is doing better than most people. On Sunday he is scheduled to be The Post's Victory Baby of the Week and the following day he'll receive a War Bond from Gail Patrick, movie actress.

The bond presentation will be made in connection with the launching of the Fourth War Loan drive here on Tuesday. Miss Patrick, whose picture, "Women in Bondage," will open at the Metropolitan Theater today, will send the bond and a letter of congratulations from Hollywood.

Paul was chosen to receive the bond because he typifies the freedom of America as contrasted with the slavery of Nazi Germany, the subject matter of the film. The son of Corpl. Paul Wayne Robinson with the Field Artillery in Italy and the former Miss Marilyn Makin, the "Miss Washington" of 1942, he was born a month and a half after his father went overseas.

Oil Stove Blast Kills Child, Burns Brother in Home

A year-old Negro girl died and her brother suffered first-degree burns yesterday when an oil stove exploded in their home at 1323 Montello ave. ne.

The girl was Ernestine Farmer, who was taken to Casualty Hospital and died at 5:30 p. m., an hour and a half after the accident. Her brother, Thomas, 3, was burned about his face and was overcome by smoke, but hospital authorities last night described his condition as "not serious."

Flames from the explosion were so intense that the parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Farmer, who were in the house at the time, were forced to wait for firemen to rescue them, they told police. The children were removed from the fire by Capt. A. N. Wright of No. 10 Engine Company and Pvt. H. T. Lentz of No. 13 Engine Company.

Ringside Table

—With Mary Harris

TONY PASTOR,
who's bringing his band to the Victory Room tonight

THERE'S A CIRCUS on the second floor of the Club Jalna. Meaning the new Mardi Gras—about the prettiest and dizziest spot conceivable. Fat, white flying horses, Ringling art, a weird "young man on the flying trapeze," a bandstand and bar that will remind you of "the surrey with the fringe on top"—all are gay eye-catchers . . . The Palm Beach Troubadours, clever sepias, directed by Freddie White, provide dance music and songs with high diversion content . . . Cordial Louis (remember him from Treasure Island?) is now in charge of Jalna and Mardi Gras cuisine and service.

Little Jack Little took his new G. I. haircut and South Pacific jokes from El Patio the other evening for an hour or two and helped provide a big evening at the Touchdown Club's dinner at the Statler.

"YOU'RE SOUTHERN, AREN'T YOU?" we said to Bud Waples, Del Rio's new band leader. "Not a bit of it, I'm from St. Louis," he replied. "But the whole band is talking Deep South style accounta we've been playing down there for months. But I haven't caught any of the boys calling girls 'Sugar' yet." he added, hopefully. "If I do I'll fine them."

RAYMOND MASSEY will begin a singing engagement at Restaurant "400" on Monday. We-ell, he isn't the Raymond Massey of the movies. But that's his name and he has a fine bass voice and won last Monday's "Stardust Night" contest at "400." Runner-up was Peggy Martin, nifty and pretty trumpetist. But nearly in the money were Jinny Hazell, Janet Barr, Rachael Borst and June Elliott, all clever and lovely young singers.

George Berg of the Brown Derby has written a number called "Purple Shadows." Bob Preble will soon sing it at Paul Young's.

STARTLING MOMENTS. When Galente raises Leonarda high over his head with one arm and spins her in the Latin Quarter show. She is not so tiny, either . . . When the girl half of the Flying Hamiltons is bounced on her chassis while roller skating in the Casino Royal show. She smiles through it all like a super-Pollyanna . . . The suspense at Troika when Juanita Del Rio circles the floor and decides which ringsider is going to get that "Bunny, Bunny, Bunny" plus a nice lipstick kiss . . . The giggles at Lotus when Bill Strickland announced the Lotus Belles—but they didn't show up because they were having trouble getting into their hoopskirts. Johnny Raub bridged the hiatus with an ad lib but very good trumpet solo.

Dutch Asked to Use Chalk for Sugar

The composition of "coffee" in Holland last spring was 53 per cent roasted grain, 24 per cent roasted chicory, 18 per cent green peas, 4 per cent coffee and 1 per cent of "roasted mixture No. 6," which is what was left over from coffee substitutes used before.

Tea-substitute tablets contain essence of tannin, milk-sugar, salts and coloring matter; but many Hollanders prefer to prepare their own teas from the leaves and flowers of various plants.

Life flowers, cherry leaves, nuts, roses, blackberries, raspberries, strawberries, cherry stems, tulip and crocus bulbs are all being used for this purpose, and because tea-lovers had been denuding wild bushes to such an extent, it was prohibited to gather leaves of birch, wild hawthorn, raspberry and roseberry, whortleberries and blackberries.

German occupation authorities have advised housewives to use powdered chalk as a substitute for sugar. They claim that chalk neutralizes the acidity of vegetables such as rhubarb just as well as does sugar. Hotels and restaurants are forbidden to serve sugar for use in coffee or use it in preparing other beverages.

Outlook Now Appears Hopeful For Angina Pectoris Patients

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

The man or woman who has a sudden attack of severe pain around the heart which the physician pronounces angina pectoris generally takes the gloomiest view of the ultimate outcome, makes a new will, and lies back, waiting for the inevitable.

He may lie that way for nearly 20 years, according to modern statistical surveys.

In other words, the pronouncement of angina, while it is by no means to be taken lightly, is not necessarily a prophecy of immediate doom.

The most complete and reliable statistics ever made on this subject have just been published by Drs. White, Bland and Miskall of Boston. They followed up 50 cases of angina whom they saw during or previous to 1931 and ascertained the status, activity and health of each one of them as cf the current year.

Duration of Life Increasing

If these and other studies are to be believed, the duration of life of the patient after angina is increasing. In 1918 a report showed that the average was three years. Mackenzie found it to be five years in 1925. In 1931 it was about the same. In the 1943 group the average (of those who died) is nearly eight years.

It is possible to suppose that this improvement is due to a better understanding of the disease, more accurate diagnosis, and better methods of treatment. At any rate the improvement is there, set down in black and white.

If you survive three years, your chances of living out a fair expectancy began to increase. In this series of patients seven are living 20 years after the first attack, four are living 24 years after, and one is still living 32 years after the first attack.

Obeying Doctor Essential

Your chances of living some time after the first attack increase proportionately with the faithfulness with which you obey your doctor's orders about a long period of rest after a severe attack.

The fellow who decides after his first attack on a short life but a merry one is pretty sure to attain at least half his decision—it will be short.

The actual figures on 500 cases—445 patients are dead and 55 are living. The number 445 may seem very high, but remember the average age when the patient entered the experience is 55. And of those who died the average duration of life was seven years, 10 months, two weeks.

That would bring the life term up almost to the scriptural limit. Of the 55 who are still living the average duration of life is 18 years three months.

Your Baby And Mine

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

The reluctance of the overweight child to get himself into situations in which his weight might make him helpless is apparent to any observant mother.

Mrs. K. B. B. notices that her 2½-year-old boy, who weighs 40 pounds, is very cautious about falling down. "He rarely undertakes anything he can't master easily, though I've always tried to encourage him.

"He is a good eater. For breakfast he has 15 drops of concentrated oil (5 would be enough), orange juice, one egg and a cup of cocoa. Since his second birthday I have denied him cereal though he still asks for it occasionally.

"For dinner he has meat or fish, potatoes or rice and one other vegetable. Every other day he has pudding or cake.

"For supper he has vegetable or dry cereal or fruit. He drinks a quart of milk a day and never has any candy except chocolate. He sleeps 14 out of the 24 hours. He weighed only 8 pounds at birth and 25 at 1 year old. Please tell me what I should do. Would it help to remove the cream from his milk?

By all means use skimmed milk and include three slices of whole-grain bread daily with a liberal amount of butter to make up for the loss of the viatmin A due to skimming.

Try reducing the calorie intake by the following changes in the present diet:

Breakfast—Orange juice, one egg, the toast and cup of skimmed milk.

Lunch—Lean meat, fish or chicken, two green vegetables, a dessert of fresh fruit or gelatine and fruit or cooked fruit. Milk as above.

Supper—Ready-cooked cereal or cottage cheese plus cooked fruit or custard or junket and the milk.

18th Century Furniture Set Highest Mark

By Elizabeth M. Boykin

The eighteenth century is regarded as the period when furniture-making reached its highest point of achievement in England, France and America. In England the chief cabinet makers of the period were Chippendale, Adam, Hepplewhite, Sheraton, and furniture of this time is often described with the names of these designers.

Named for Kings

It is also called Georgian, because the different kings of England during this period were all named George. In other words, eighteenth century English furniture and Georgian furniture is the same thing. Furniture described by the names of the cabinet makers listed above is also Georgian and eighteenth century English.

In America, fine furniture of the eighteenth century is called both Colonial and Federal. The best was made in New England and in Philadelphia, with the names of McInytre and Savery as leading cabinet makers. This furniture followed the general designs of English furniture of the period.

Federal, Colonial Designs

Thus the terms Federal and Colonial may also refer to eighteenth century American furniture. The term Colonial also applies to some furniture made before the eighteenth century, however, and the term Federal sometimes applies to furniture made after the eighteenth century.

In France, the furniture of the eighteenth century is usually known by the names of the monarchs of this time, Louis XV and Louis XVI. It is divided into two types: the very royal furniture made for the court, which was elegant, formal, gilded, and the furniture made for everyday people—called French provincial.

Dr. Parsons Dies at 93; Rites Tonight

Dr. Mary Almera Parsons, 93, the first woman to be admitted to the District Medical Society and the first to be elected to the office of vice president of that body, died Wednesday after an illness of five years. Funeral services will be held tonight at 8 p. m. at Deal funeral home, 4812 Georgia ave. nw.

DR. PARSONS

It took an act of Congress to get her the right to join the Medical Society because in 1875 when she and another woman physician petitioned Congress to amend the charter of the society, this same charter provided only for the admission of "gentlemen." The amendment substituted the word "persons" for "gentlemen."

Even before being admitted to the society, Dr. Parsons practiced in Washington. She delivered the first Chinese baby to be born in the city shortly after she had graduated from Howard University in 1874. As a result for years she was the physician for Washington's growing Chinatown.

Practiced 60 Years

For 60 years she practiced her profession and was particularly noted for her refusal to send bills to patients in poor circumstances.

When she petitioned Congress for an amendment to the charter of the Medical Society, in 1875, she gave her address as 1322 F st. nw. (Where Brentano's Book Store is now located.)

She was born in Colebrook, N. H., and was educated at Robinson Female Seminary, Exeter, N. H.

Founded Society

During World War I she was appointed to the Committee of Women Physicians of the Council of National Defense. She was one of the founders and the first president of the Women's Medical Society of the District of Columbia.

She remained unmarried and is survived by a nephew in New Hampshire and a niece in California.

After the funeral services here today the body will be taken to Colebrook for burial.

Corpl. Leahy To Be Buried In Arlington

Requiem mass will be offered at 9:30 a. m. tomorrow at St. Anthony's Catholic Church, 1030 Lawrence st. ne., for Corpl. Robert Earle Leahy, who died Monday as a result of gunshot wounds received while on maneuvers with a field artillery battalion in Tennessee. Burial will be in Arlington.

The son of Mr. and Mrs. James H. Leahy of 4632 12th st. ne., the 22-year-old soldier had been stationed at Fort Jackson, S. C., before going on maneuvers several weeks ago.

Corporal Leahy attended Holy Comforter School and Eastern High School. When he joined the Army in June, 1941, he was employed as an accountant for the Seaboard Air Line dining car service and was a student at the Benjamin Franklin School of Accounting.

In addition to his father, who is assistant building superintendent at the Washington Gas Light Co., and his mother, Corporal Leahy leaves two brothers, Pvt. James H. Leahy, stationed at Fort MacArthur, Calif., and Ralph J. Leahy of Washington.

Louis A. Smith

Funeral services for Louis Allen Smith of 3420 16th st. nw., assistant chief in the Claims Division of the General Accounting Office, who died Wednesday, will be held at 1 p. m. today at Hines' funeral home. Interment will be in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

A Government employe since 1917, when he worked for the War Department, Mr. Smith was 58 years of age.

Mr. Smith was in charge of the Freight Transportation Section of GAO, and before employment by the Government worked for Pennsylvania and Southern Railroads.

He was an active Mason, charter member of Congress Lodge, No. 37, FAAM, and its secretary for 22 years. Other affiliations included Columbia Chapter, No. 1, RAM, and Arem Chapter, No. 10, OES.

He leaves his wife, Mrs. Emily S. Smith; a brother, R. Ernest Smith of Upper Marlboro, Md., and two sisters, Mrs. Daisy Thirles of Bowie, Md., and Mrs. Florence Howard of Baltimore.

Edwin S. McIntosh Dies; Was Political Writer

Edwin S. McIntosh, 53, political writer for the New York Herald Tribune who had covered all Republican and Democratic National Conventions since 1928, died Wednesday in New York.

Before specializing in political writing 16 years ago, Mr. McIntosh covered many major news stories including the Mississippi region flood and the return of Charles A. Lindbergh from France in 1927. He toured the country with Herbert Hoover during the 1928 presidential campaign and later accompanied Mr. Hoover on his trip to South America.

HOW'S PHIL?
OH HE'S FEELING FINE NOW, OWNEY! HE EVEN TRIED TO DONATE SOME OF HIS BLOOD TO THE RED CROSS BLOOD BANK YESTERDAY! HE'S UP IN HIS ROOM!
I'M SO GRATEFUL TO YOU, OWNEY—FOR WHAT YOU DID FOR HIM! I HOPE YOU DIDN'T INJURE YOUR HEALTH BY WORKING IN THAT WAR PLANT.
INJURE MY HEALTH? WHY, ANNIE, I'M GOING TO KEEP ON WORKING THERE—IT MAKES ME FEEL GREAT TO KNOW THAT I'M DOING MY BIT!
THAT'S WONDERFUL, OWNEY—BUT I'M AFRAID PHILIP WILL NEVER GO BACK—HE KNOWS THE MEN WILL KID HIM ABOUT THE MONEY HE LOST!
GAMBLING IN THE PLANT HAS BEEN TABOOED, ANNIE! I THINK HE'LL GO BACK!
—AND BURKE, THE FOREMAN, SAID YOU WERE THE ONLY MAN WHO COULD GET MAXIMUM PRODUCTION OUT OF YOUR MACHINE! THEY NEED YOU BADLY, PHIL!
OKAY! I'LL REPORT TOMORROW MORNING!

Victory Center—Street and Fourth Floors—The Hecht Co.

"Keep Backing the Attack!" With these fighting words, the U. S. Treasury opens the Fourth War Loan on January 18th. As a fitting prelude, leading up to and into this great Victory effort, The Hecht Co. is privileged to present a Tribute to the Unconquerables . . . a Nation-wide War Bond Drive, co-sponsored by the Saturday Evening Post, now in progress. This coast-to-coast drive is inspired by Poet Joseph Auslander's magnificent Open Letters to the Unconquerables, which millions have recently read in the Saturday Evening Post. Auslander's letters have brought home to the people of this Nation the vivid, stark picture of the sacrifices made by tens of millions in the ravaged, war-torn lands. And the purpose of this drive, and the Fourth War Loan, is to impress our people with the great need for sacrifice now . . . to keep the attack rolling . . . to release these nations to fight . . . to speed final Victory for all.
